NO WEDDING BELLS

(Continued from page 1.) It, still I would like to make you happy too as you said I could be married and go home any time and you would surely be kind to me while I am so poor now. I know I can save money now but I can hardly know what to do. You know I told you many times that I never intended to marry so I will tell you now why I say this. Mr. Rowley while I like and respect you and would be as kind to you as it is possible for me to be. Now you will understand why I speak so plain as I have and I don't think you would expect me to know anything. I never be happy with you if you do. That is why I have never married. You will write me as soon as you receive this letter and tell me, understand, if you will be kind to me and make me happy as you promised so. I will write to you today telling her what I have written to you but I will say nothing yet to any one else nor do I want you to, but read my letter then let me know.
