Best Fun Ever.

By WALTER WELLMAN.

Mamma-Good little boys go to Heaven. Willie-Yes, and Pop says if I'm good I can go to the circus.

JUST AS MUCH. Wife-You promised me you would not drink any more. He-Well, I'm not drinking any more, am I?

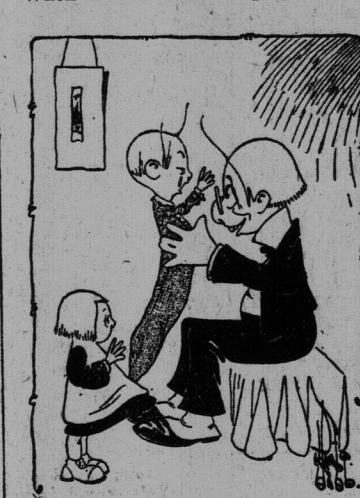

He-Give me a kiss, won't you? They're cheap. She-Well, they're worth their face value.

Just a dash of powder. On a dainty little nose. Often keeps a fellow waiting. When he's anxious to propose.

“Why don't you try to forget that old love affair, Helen?” “I can't, dear; I learned it by heart.”

Cholly-And how much will you take for the baby? Lulu-Oh! I guess Ma'd let you have him cheap; he's damaged anyway; ain't got no teeth.

ALLOWED MURDERER TO GO TO SAVE EXPENSE OF TRIAL

This is the Story Judge Tuck Told Sunbury Grand Jury.

Fredericton, N. B., May 14.-Chief Justice Tuck presided at the May term of the Sunbury Circuit Court at Burton. A grand indictment was presented to the grand jury in the case of the King vs. McLean and Samuel Adams charged with horse stealing and a true bill was returned. As the accused recently escaped from jail and were not recaptured a second count for jail-breaking was added to the indictment and on this jury also found a true bill.

In his address to the grand jury the chief justice spoke of the serious and disgraceful condition of the court house and jail, pronouncing them the worst in the whole province. He said the buildings were unsanitary, badly ventilated and wholly unfit for the purpose for which they were intended.

In the course of his remarks his honor stated that he had been given to understand that many years ago a Sunbury jury had acquitted a man on a charge of murder for no other reason than that they wanted to escape the cost of erecting a scaffold on which to hang him. It looked to him as if the same spirit of meanness was in the county, but the time had arrived when the people should wake up and put themselves in touch with 20th century conditions.

In regard to the escape of McLean and Adams he had been credibly informed that a public official had expressed himself as pleased that they had got away as the county would be saved the expense of the trial. He would be sorry to learn that such sentiment prevailed in the community, but the evidence pointed that way.

His honor, in conclusion, expressed the hope that the grand jury would recommend the erection of a new court house and jail at Oromocto. The grand jury after due discussion made the following presentation: “The majority of the grand jury of Sunbury, after visiting the court house and jail condemn the present buildings and site and strongly recommend the building of a new court house and jail at Oromocto.”

Foreman J. E. Stocker addressing the court recommended that some provision be made by which grand jurors would in future be paid for their services. His honor warmly approved of the principle of paying grand jurors and instructed the clerk to forward the jury's recommendation to the attorney general. Court then adjourned sine die.

While driving near the corner of Union and Dorchester streets yesterday afternoon Col. Tucker and his driver were thrown from their carriage by a wheel becoming detached from the vehicle. The colonel received an ugly cut on the head, and was shaken up considerably. He was carried to his home on Chipman street, where he is now doing nicely.
