GAME THERE ISPrivate Knight of Gordon High-

Square Last Night

"You can tell the fellows for me that there is a good time at the front and lots of fun. It is a game and you have to pay, but this is the biggest game there is and a man has to reckon with himself whether he is big enough to go in to it," said Private Norman F. R. Knight, of the Gordon Highlanders, wounded, to a Halifax Daily Echo reporter. Private Knight is one of nine men left of the original 1,800 Gordons who sailed from England in the early days of the war for France, to fight the Hun. He belongs to Halifax, being a son of W. C. Knight, tobacconist, George street, and is now enjoying a well earned rest with his people.

"We need the men and the sooner they all come, the better."

His Own Experience.

Private Knight, while willing to tell about the necessity for more recruits, was modest when it came to relating his own adventures, but told enough to show that he has been through as hard and trying experiences as any in the great war. He has been three times wounded. One, a bayonet wound, was slight and did not seriously inconvenience him, but the second, a bullet from a sniper, sent him into the hospital for two weeks, and the third, one of the famous "Coal Boxes" almost disposed of him for keeps.

"I've lost almost all idea of places and dates," said he, "but I know that I was at the front for seven months, and that our regiment, or what was left of the original, reinforced by fresh drafts, was in the retreat from Mons, the battle of Marne, the battle of the Aisne, the first and second battles of Ypres, and the battle of Arras. I have been from Antwerp to Arras, and I received my quietus in the first racket at Ypres."

"What about the reports of German atrocities on the field?" asked the reporter.

"The worst has not been told," replied Private Knight. "I have seen strong men place their heads in their hands and weep at some of the sights they have seen. The Germans have let to answer for and it is up to all our able bodied men who are not now on the way to get a move on and assist in stamping out the methods of the Hun."

In Thick of Fraz.

Private Knight was in Arras when the war broke out. He lost no time in coming to Canada and before the month of August had passed was on the Atlantic bound for Glasgow. Arriving there he enlisted in the Gordon Highlanders. Six days later his regiment, eighteen hundred strong, including reinforcements, left for the front. Arriving in France they were pushed right forward and jumped into the fighting straightaway. His regiment was into the thick of it and lost heavily. In a

A Glimpse of The British Navy

London, Sept. 6.—For the first time the veil of secrecy over the British naval operations has been lifted. During the past week the correspondent visited the grand fleet and the great naval bases. At one naval barracks, he saw dry-docks capable of docking the largest dreadnoughts, which had been built since the war began. Maps were shown to the correspondent, showing where the German submarines had been sighted, and one on which the results of the attacks were classified under "capture," "supposed sunk," and "sunk." When bubbles are observed rising for a long time at the same spot in smooth water it is taken for granted that a submarine's career has been ended. When an officer was asked, "how do you get them?" his answer was, "Sometimes by ramming, sometimes by gunfire, sometimes by explosion, and in other ways we will not tell of."

During his visit to the British fleet in the past week the correspondent, after boarding all of the more important ships, witnessed magnificent spectacles—that of the whole force putting to sea. While on board the flagship of Admiral Sir John Jellicoe, a message was brought to the commander-in-chief, who called a secretary and spoke briefly to him. Word was passed around that the whole fleet had been ordered to weigh anchor and proceed to sea. Guests on board a destroyer at the mouth of the harbor watched that unprecedented procession of naval power make its exit, led by graceful light cruisers and flotillas of destroyers.

"That are not German submarines waiting outside?" was asked.

charge that had been ordered on an enemy trench, Knight came in contact with the end of a German bayonet. The point of the bayonet, and the peculiar shape of the German blade, the tip caught in his teeth and there stopped. The "Boche" at the other end of the weapon thought he had "stuck" his man and withdrew the blade. Thereupon Knight struck him in the chest and then drove the butt of his rifle into the German's face. Two "Tutons" came at him, but a comrade came to his assistance, and he broke through and a nipped tongue.

The next affair was more serious for Knight. He was in the open when a sniper's bullet struck him in the leg, fortunately missing the bone, and passing right through. He was taken to the base hospital and sent over to England to be re-equipped. At Ypres, when he was engaged in tearing down a house to get boards where to reinforce the trenches, a "Coal Box" landed in Knight's immediate vicinity, and he went up in the air. "I don't know how high I went," he said this morning, "but it seemed to be about six feet. I landed on a buggy-top which was lying in the yard of the house we had been tearing down. That was my finish pro tem."

Months in Hospital

Private Knight was taken through the series of hospitals to Boulogne, thence to the hospital at Exeter, where he spent many months. He arrived at Exeter last week. He saw a number of Halifax boys in London, including his brother, who is a member of the Twenty-fifth Nova Scotia Battalion of the Second Contingent.

He hopes soon to be well enough to go back. His last wound came at an inopportune moment for him, as the next day he was to have gone to England for two weeks' probationary course for his lieutenantcy. If he recovers soon he hopes to be able to go with one of the Canadian contingents.

vention—Predicts World-Wide Clash Between Capital and Labor

Bristol, Eng., Sept. 6.—The forty-seventh annual Trades Union Congress, which is expected to be one of the most important gatherings in British labor history, held its first session here today. On his opening address, James A. Seddon, chairman of the congress, discussed the problems of the day, giving chief place to those arising from the war. Such complex questions as conscription, the exploitation of food products, the regulation of labor under war conditions, and female labor would, he declared, test the nation to its foundation, and demanded immediate and unambiguous answers. Chairman Seddon urged the congress to prepare for the time when there would be a resumption of world-wide contests in the contest between capital and labor.

"I feel confident," he added, "that I carry the great bulk of this congress with me when I say we offer our so-called strikers' sympathy, and, if assurances be needed, our determination that their once favored lands shall be restored to the people of Belgium before we agree to lay down the sword."

To Purchase
Arms for Roumania

New York, Sept. 6.—Colonel A. Miclescu, of the artillery branch of the Roumanian army, arrived here today on the steamship Rochambeau from Bordeaux, with a commission to purchase, in the United States, supplies for the Roumanian army, part of which purchase will be boots and shoes. Col. Miclescu declined to comment on the possibility of Roumania entering the war, but he said that about 80,000 troops were mobilized and fully equipped for call.

Among other passengers were three survivors of the straits, J. Delorimer, of Montreal; C. H. Fringle, of Toronto, and Lieut. Walter Adams, of London. Lieut. Adams and Mr. Delorimer said that they were in the last boat to leave the ship, and that they were thrown into the water when the ship was struck, and that he saw the torpedo coming, when it was only 800 yards distant. The Rochambeau brought 840 passengers. The trip was uneventful.

VALUABLE ADVICE
AS TO PRESENT NEEDS

Mrs. McLean Blynn, the secretary of the Ladies' Association of the Canadian War Contingent Association, in a recent interesting letter gives some valuable advice as to the present needs of the association which is supplying field comforts to the troops, and in addition supporting the Queen's Canadian Hospital at Shorncliffe.

"As far as hospitals are concerned," Mrs. Blynn states, "surgical gauze, absorbent cotton and surgical gauze dressing, are the principal things. Further, such articles as tobacco, soap, tooth-paste are needed in large quantities in they wanted and that he, Mr. Murphy, didn't care so long as they picked a good campaigner.

On a roll-call the few leaders who agreed with Mr. Murphy that Edwards would be the best candidate to lead the party links together, and that Al Smith could not be spared from his fighting leadership of the Democrats in the assembly, were silent. So Edwards' designation for which he was nominated by Big Tom Foley, called "the second biggest man in Tammany Hall," months ago.

The Edwards upheaval entirely overshadowed the fact that Judge Edward Swenson of Green Bay, Wis., was named for district attorney, with Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan as his only opponent, and the Republican organization and Tammany fixed up fusion on all the six supreme court nominations and the nomination for the city court, the result being that the slate selected by Tammany is the choice of both parties.

The Republicans got only five of the judicial places, while the Democrats got five, two of whom, however, are classed as independents.

"All German hearts," continued the telegram, "beat higher when you are thought of. I feel that I should again thank you on this day from the bottom of my heart. You have engraved your name in iron letters on the tablets of history."

"I order that the regiment of which you were recently appointed honorary colonel shall forever bear your name and be known as Infantry Regiment General Field Marshal von Hindenburg. 2nd. Masurian Regiment, No. 147."
