If you had been out on the main street of Galt the other day, at a bustle hour, you would have witnessed the novel spectacle of a well-built man, in clerical garb, "holding it down" for a poor, crippjed vendor of lead pencils, and creating a run of tusiness on what, as it happened, was proving an off-day of trade for the legiess unfortunate. The bunch of pencils in the hands of the cripple's coadjutor went like hot cakes. As he turned in the proceeds and left his post, with a word of good cheer to his partner pro tem., you would have heard people remark: "That's just like John Ridley, of Trinity, the man who goes about doing good."

There is, perhaps, no clergyman in the Anglican Diocese of Huron better known or more sincerely esteemed and beloved than the Rev. Cenen Ridley, rector of Trinity Church, Gait. For over twenty-five years he has labored in this community, a rigid English Church parson estensibly, a broad Catholic in reality—for If you had been out on the mai and the tangled flotsam of the ocean? These questions are suggested by conditions on the east coast of the Province of Nova Scotia.

Here is an archipelago of thousands of isles, wooded and rocky, their vegetation telling of the warmth the waters of the sea have snatched from the Gulf Stream. Four hundred years ago the hardy French voyagers who first settled this part of Canada halled these pretty islands with delight. They settled there before they would trust themselves upon the mainland, and there they turned out their live stock—Snaggy Breton ponies, hardy little Jersey-like cows and lanky sheep.

The sheep thrived where the cattle and the horses found the problem of existing difficult. Soon they paddled in the shallow waters of the outgoing tide in their desire to catch at the floating eel grass and bulbous kelp. Then the discovery came that swimming wis not beyond their powers, and they need not remain prisoners on single islands when there were scores of others for them to visit.

So it came about that they peopled numbers of the islands, and straggling along the whole coast line became no man's flocks, having returned to a pristine wildness. Their former owners drifted inland and after a come years the islands were left hen Danger Threatens They Often gling along the winde coast into became no man's flocks, having returned to a prisitine wildness. Their former owners drifted inland and after some years the islands were left to their old-time solitude. The sheep could not be reclaimed and were left to their own devices.

So it comes about that in Nova Scotia, especially in Guysboro county, there is to-day a breed of big sheep loaded down with heavy wool of as many years' growth as they are old, perfectly wild, fiving on the sea coast. Swift on their feet they are as slert to danger as their cousins, the mountain sheep of the Pacific coast. They jump from cliffs to considerable height, trusting to their heavy fleece to save their bones from harm. They are ready on the instant to plungs into the waves and swim off to safety. They are sure-footed as antelopes, vigilant as chamois. This, too, despite the fact that they are always rolling in fat.

the fact that they are always rolling in fat.

They are partly carnivorous, these sheep of the sea coast. At least an observant watcher will notice that they nose away at the soft spots of the beach after eel worms and mussels, and chewed clam shells are commonly to be met with on their pasturages. But their regular tood is dulse, sed grass and kelp.

In the winter they are apt to suffer. The spray dashes into the fieece and freezes there in cold weather. All along the high water mark the sea walls of see form. Many sheep are drowned here while feeding on sea weed. Were it not for the dangers of the winter season the sheep would the winter season the sheep would become exceedingly numerous, for they breed quickly and not very many of them fall before the hunters.

With the reopening a few night ago of the Georgetown, Ont., Conowned institution, combining invary and recreation rooms, the problem of a superfluity of Protestant churches in that town was solved. The fine stone structure was built over thirty years ago at a cost of $40,000. The town found it rather difficult to support five Protestant churches. The idea of using the church building as a library and recreation institution was mooted early this year, and the council of the congregation endorsed it and voluntarily handed over the property to the town council. Half of the main auditorium will be used as a library, while the other half has been reconstructed into a small lecture room, containing 100 chairs. By means of public subscription and funds derived from garden parties and like entertainments, a women's organization reased money and recreation rooms, the problem o women's organization raised money to create a rest room and reading room for ladies, which occupies half the basement. Here the Women's Institute will endeavor to provide a comfortable room where farmers wives may rest when they drive into own.

The remaining portion of the The remaining portion of the basement has been equipped as a recreation room for the young men of the town, and it is expected that it will solve to a large degree the problem of keeping the young men off the streets at night.

formance of "The Garden of Allah" that tragic drama of the renegade monk who married a woman, and by her was sent back to the monastery to spend the rest of his life there.

Just as the big monastery gate had closed, and the noise of the shot boit was heard, Dominie, the woman, was left alone on the stage.

At this point a newly-rich society bud turned to her escort, and remarked quite audibly, "Well, she is a grass widow now." Whole Train Was Lost.

It is sa'd that in the days of the construction of the C. P. R. line construction of the C. P. R. line through Gossport Siding an engine attached to a string of cars cank through the grade and was never recovered. Some probability is given the story by the recent finding of kegs of old spikes and rusted nails along the track at that opot.

The chief warden had already collected a gang of about thirty trustworthy men, and set them to work with buckets. There is a pond just across the road, and they formed a chain and passed the buckets like lightning. "No free men," said an eye-witness, "could have worked harder, and as for those who were on the ladder they never finched although showers of sparks were beating down upon them and burning holes in their clothes.

They worked so well that they got the flames under, but some were so exhausted that they had to be helped back to their cells.

One man named Newbrook fainted, and was taken to the hospital. He was delirious that night and could not leave his bed for more than three weeks.

"Again in February, 1895, the wash-house at Dartmoor prison caught fire, but thanks to the splendid conduct of the prisoners"—as the governor wrote in his report—the flames were got under before serious damage was done.

On March 10th, 1891, there fell and the south of England the worst blizzard of snow ever recorded. On the heights of Dartmoor the gale taged furiously for three days, the cold was terrible, the drifts were piled forty feet deep, and did not melt until the following June.

On the 13th the sheep began to die. Two prisoners asked to see the governor, and volunteered to lead a party to rescue the poor creatures. party to rescue the poor creature me forty convicts joined them, and armed with shovels cut their way

Many a convict has risked his life helping a warder attacked by some prisoner who has suddenly run amok. At Portland, some few years ago, was a man whom we will years ago, was a man whom we will call Thomson, who was noted and feared for his mad fits of rage. He had already got into trouble for throwing a bath plug at the governor, and for attempting to as-sault a warder with his own baton.
