Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indiscrete. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

it was easy to reach it at low tide. The work was pursued by gullied fishermen using oyster tongs and other primitive implements. However, despite these handicaps, the government recovered treasure to the value of nearly $280,000. The sea did not intend to give up her riches readily, and toward the end of 1801 the wreck was completely buried by a bank of sand, which put an effectual stop to further salvage operations by means of the facilities then available. It was not until 1814 that efforts were renewed to recover the remaining treasure, but the undertaking was unsuccessful. In 1821 a company, known as The Decretal Salvors obtained a royal concession from Holland upon the understanding that fifty per cent. of the value of whatever should be salvaged should be paid to the Dutch government. This enterprise was composed of Netherlands and is still in existence. In 1823, the British underwriters, stirred by the efforts of the Dutch company, appealed through diplomatic channels to the King of Holland. The latter, to show his friendly regard for the King of England donated his interest in the wreck to King George IV., who in turn, made over this gift to Lloyds' committee as a part indemnification for the loss that Association had suffered in the wrecking of the "Latine." This point is of present concern because all salvage operations, since 1823 by British subjects, have been authorized by Lloyds' of London and to that extent, backed by that Association. The Decretal Salvors still have their right in fifty per cent of the values recovered.

Pumping Gold Bullion From The Sea.

During the past summer season efforts were renewed to recover more treasure from the wreck of the old British frigate "Latine." This waterlogged hulk has been a fascinating speculation for a good many years, and the alluring part of the project lies in the fact that no one knows just how much specie and bullion the ship carried when lost. What is known however, is that something like half a million dollars worth of gold and silver bars and coins have been reclaimed in the course of the past century. There is every reason for the belief that the frigate had many times his treasure on board when she sailed from England on the 9th of October 1799, and this belief has inspired the efforts made from time to time to bring to the surface the buried riches.

In the last years of the eighteenth century, plodding Hamburg awoke one morning, so to speak, to find herself the principal commercial port of northern Europe, and this sudden prominence came when she was financially unprepared to meet the exigencies of trade. Her bankers were unable to provide the funds for the prompt honoring of bills of lading, an exchange involved a discount of even as much as thirty per cent. Business could not be pushed at this rate without a ruinous loss, and the merchants of London, with the assistance of British bankers determined to relieve the stress by shipping funds to the German port. At first it was intended to send the money in a merchant craft suitably conveyed by an armed ship; but news of this relief movement rapidly spread among the London traders and it was finally decided to dispatch the gold and silver in a man-of-war because of the amount involved. It was believed that in this way the menace of the French cruisers could best be avoided and the treasure more speedily and safely delivered in Hamburg. Accordingly, Admiral Duncan, then commanding the British North Sea fleet, detailed the frigate "Latine" a ship captured from the French some years before for this service. The "Latine" was loaded with her precious cargo secretly in order that the enemy across the channel should not know of her mission. This secretiveness has been principally responsible for a large measure of the uncertainty which has since existed in regard to the quantity of bullion and specie dispatched. On the 9th October 1799, the "Latine" sailed from Yarmouth roads and headed north for the principal commercial port of northern Europe, and this sudden prominence came when she was financially unprepared to meet the exigencies of trade. Her bankers were unable to provide the funds for the prompt honoring of bills of lading, an exchange involved a discount of even as much as thirty per cent. Business could not be pushed at this rate without a ruinous loss, and the merchants of London, with the assistance of British bankers determined to relieve the stress by shipping funds to the German

THE NEW REMEDY FOR
Nervous Exhaustion
Indigestion, Heartburn, Dyspepsia and Constipation result more often from nervous exhaustion than from food. Dieting or pills will not avail. The only remedy is nerve repair. "ASAYA-NEURALL" is and makes possible this cure. It feeds the nerves, induces sleep, quickens the appetite and digestion, and these disorders disappear. $1.50 per bottle. 1886 the results were too meager to pay for the labor involved. In 1886, steam, auction, shell-dredgers were engaged in the work for the first time. It was believed that it would be possible in that way to remove the overlying sand which had increased in depth over the hulk. Work in this way was pursued for the next three years-yielding various coins to the combined value of $4,600. The shell dredgers were operated each season for the following four years, but none of the treasure was brought to the surface. The various other efforts made since 1893 and until the National Salvage Association took over the task during the present year have been without result.

The present salvors have attacked the problem from a new point. Heretofore, all of the money and bullion reclaimed has been found lying outside of the contour of the stern of the wreck and on the side upon which the hulk rested. The National Salvage Association believe the bulk of the gold and silver to have been stowed amidships in the shot lockers adjacent to the main cable room the cannon balls being piled on top of the treasure. It is hard to understand what foundation exists for this opinion. As the midship section in Fig. 2 shows, the cable room and shot lockers occupy a large space freely open to the crew by reason of the exigencies of service, and it is difficult to justify the placing of such riches in an exposed place of this sort. On the other hand, the after magazine of those old frigates was a carefully guarded room, and either that compartment or one of the divisions lying in the same after section would have been the likeliest place to hold valuables that called for continual surveillance. The fact that all the gold and silver bars and most of the coins so far recovered have been found buried in the sand about the stern bears out the belief that the treasure was housed in the magazine or after-mast cabin.

NAVAL BATTLE WITH HORSES.

How 3000 Cowboys Captured the Spanish Fleet.

Paez, who was the first President of the Republic of Venezuela, was perhaps the only man who ever fought a naval battle on horseback. It is a matter of history that he, to whom more than any other man, apart from Simon Bolivar, Venezuela owes her independence, actually attacked and captured with his cavalry a fleet of ships.

Bolivar was endeavoring to cross the Apure River in the struggle for independence, but was prevented from doing so by some eight Spanish gunboats, which moved up and down the stream as he did. Bolivar was in despair for a while. To Paez, who was second in command, he appealed for counsel, saying that he could never cross the river so long as the Spanish gunboats were there. "If only we could capture them," the revolutionary leader observed, "the rest would be easy."

Paez decided that he would have those ships or die, and he accordingly told his regiment of cowboys to follow him. Paez himself had been a cowboy on the plains of Orinoco and was the idol of his men. So when he spurred his horse into the stream, calling on his men to follow, of the 3,000 cowboys and their mounts, which are taught to swim as well as to gallop, there was not a single man to hold out in this unique assault upon the gunboats. It being night, the Spanish fleet were taken quite unawares. The cowboys wriggled from their saddles to the decks of the vessels, letting their mounts swim back to shore. Having thus cut off their own retreat, it was a question of win or die. They fought well, and every gunboat was captured.

THE EDIBLE CRAB

Something of the Curious Life of This Half Fish Half Animal.

The edible crab is obliged to moult or cast off its shell many times during its life. This moulting appears to be an unpleasant ordeal to pass, for the crabs often die during the act. When we see that they are not only obliged to escape from the carapax or shell, but also from the hard covering of their legs, delicate mouth-parts, and even gills - turning themselves inside out as it were - it is not surprising that they perish during the ordeal. The crab crawls up into some secluded nook or crevice in shallow water to moult, out of its way of its hard-shelled relatives, for the helpless, newly-moulted, or soft-shell crab, if found, is devoured by them, as well as by several species of fishes. Fortunately for the crab, the soft covering hardens rapidly, and in a few hours it has a new and strong armour, and it then goes fearlessly out into deep water.

Crishman Whose Tenor Voice Equals His Boxing.

You've heard that threbbare expression, "playing both ends against the middle?" Well, what do you think of a boy who aspires to a musical education, following the prize ring to get the money that will make him a second Caruso?

You can't beat that, can you? The boy working the diet is Fred Dyer of Cardiff, Wales. He says he is a better singer than he is a fighter and if this is true he must be a marvel, for he is one of the best lightweights in the British empire. Dyer's specialty is to beat his man and then, with chest heaving from the exertion and pursuant to shouts of "Thor! Thor!" he sings in a clear tenor the song the London fight-loving public has taken to.

Sometimes Dyer sings with a tip split, or his nose swollen or one of his eyes blackened. Such things don't interfere. He gets double pay for his singing act.

Dyer whipped every lightweight in Cardiff before going to London and between battles sang in the choir of the largest church in the Welsh city. His stay in London has been an unbroken string of victories. He expects to sail for the United States soon.

The boy has been doing concert work in the fashionable West-end.

Dyer says singing helps his fighting and that fighting helps his singing.

The minister was shaking hands with a new member of his congregation, a girl fresh from Sweden, and said cordially: "I would like to know your address so I can call on you."

"Oh," said the girl, innocently, "I haf a man."—Success.
