Every class of industry has left the influence of genious. Agriculture, manufactures, and commerce have all been stimulated into a musing activity. Nor has the household into a musing activity. Nor has the household been overlooked, nor the labors of woman been neglected. The sewing machine is a sample of what ingenuity has done for woman. It has multiplied her power a hundred fold with the needle. The washing of wearing apparal and other textile fabrics by mechanism has been a problem that has employed the skill of the country, and without success, until J. C. IMPORTANT DECISION.—The Chief Justice decided on Saturday in the cause of Neal et al. vs. Smith, that where a party has attached the property of a debtor under the Absconding Debtors Act, and sold it, he is entitled to the proceeds in preference to the assignee of the defendant under the "Insolvent Act of 1869," if the property has been sold before the defendent is moved into compulsory liquidation. We believe this is the first time the point has been decided in our Courts. In the case in question, the plaintiffs, Neal et al. had issued an attachment under the Absconding Debtors Act, about the middle of September last, and soon after obtained an order for the sale of such property attached, on the grounds of its being perishable—the proceeds to be held by the Sheriff to respond the final judgment in the final judgment in the cause. The property was sold about the first of October, and twenty days afterwards the detendant's extended. assignee of defendants estate, applied to the Chief Justice for an order to compel the Sheriff to pay the proceeds to him on the grounds, that, by the issue of the writ of attachment

DEATH TO BEER.—The overwhelming vote of more than two to one by which the obnoxious beer glause promise to be finally and forever wiped from our statute books is a triumph of temperance principles of which we may well tell proud. Steadily, steadily and surely, though at times sometimes slowly, have we been marching on for years towards this consumption.
