"free chevron" is not the most democratic political force at Waterloo, says U. W. student

I find it interesting that you describe the free chevron as "the University of Waterloo's student newspaper". I know that you cannot meanthat that is it's legal positionthe chevron was legally Waterloo's student newspaper until September, when it was closed down. It has not published since. There are currently two "chevrons" on campus, the "free chevron" and the "real chevron", and, since neither paper has legal status or will have anything to do with the other, it is inaccurate to describe the staff or either or both as "chevron staf-

Since the free chevron has not legal status as the student newspaper, it must be making such a claim on the moral grounds that it is supported by the students at Waterloo. This is certainly the view of its staff, a view which seems to be shared by Varsity, Excalibur, and the Canadian University Press (CUP).

A referendum was held to decide many issues regarding a student newspaper, including whether or not the chevron should be reinstated. On this question, the vote was 2276 to 224 AGAINST reinstatement. I wouldn't exactly call getting less than 9 per cent of the vote anoverwhelming endorsement of the free chevron.

It is true that the free chevron tried to organize a boycott of the referendum, claiming that its position of "Reinstate! Investigate!" was not adequately represented. Some measure of the success of this boycott can be determined by the turnout in the subsequent presidential election.

In that election, the free chevron actively encouraged everyone to vote for the candidate whom they had endorsed — the only candidate to advocate reinstatement. Despite the endorsement, that candidate received less than 25 per cent of the vote; more to the point, the voter turnout was LESS than that for the referendum which the free chevron had boycotted.

The slogan of "Reinstate! Investigate!" can also be revealed for the sham it is. The free chevron rejected its chances of reinstatement. Then, when the UW federation asked CUP to conduct an investigation, said investigation could not be held because the free chevron declined to nominate a representative. No mention was made of this fact when you mentioned that CUP endorsed the free chevron's position, but, then, it probably wasn't mentioned at the CUP meeting either — you can fool some of the people all of the time.

Let's examine some further student support for the free chevron, specifically, the recent federation council elections.

It was fed council which suspended the chevron, and it must be fed council which reinstates it, so a lot of free chevron supporters ran in the elections. In Co-op Math, the two free chevron candidates for the two positions gathered 20 per cent of the vote between them, losing solidly to two candidates who opposed reinstatement. In regular math, the situation was virtually identical (although the free chevrics did somewhat better - 37 per cent). In Arts, where it was expected that the free chevron would have support, if it had any, a free chevric was indeed elected five candidates were running for four seats, and the free chevron candidate finished fourth, one vote ahead of the fifth - place candidate. St. Jerome's College represented the free chevron's only real victory e a candidate supporting them received 97 of the 105 votes cast.

As to the ludicrous claim that the free chevron "is the most democratic political force on campus", unless democracy is defined as "taking a stand agreeing with the free chevron", the claim is groundless. Loss in election after election would be construed by anyone in any neutral position as DEMOCRATICALLY rejecting the free chevron's position.
