

several denominations. We would further recommend the appointment of delegates by these denominations, to visit the conferences of each, and to bear proper expressions of the sentiments of each of the several denominations on this subject. If any two, or more, are favourable, then let the conference of each appoint delegates to a general convention, held at such time and place as may be fixed upon, which shall be empowered to strike out a plan of Union, which can then be submitted to the proper courts of the several denominations, for their ratification. We can see no difficulty in a committee, composed of a few wise and good men, chosen out of the several churches, devising a feasible plan of Union—one which the people of these several churches would sanction, if properly laid before them. We cannot make up our mind that the majority of Methodists are bigots, and; consequently, cannot believe they would reject a fair and equitable plan by which all breaches may be healed, and much scandal wiped away. As the General Conference of the M. E. Church does not meet until one year from this summer, we would recommend, as a means of facilitating the object we have in view, the appointment of delegates to that body, by all Methodist bodies who feel favourable to Union. Let the ministers and members, who feel favourable to the movement, agitate, by all lawful means, this question—keeping the matter before the people until opinion is sufficiently revolutionized to admit of the compromise necessary. It is not only a laudable movement, but one that will recommend itself to every man's judgment. Then what if some difficulties do arise, and some clouds threaten,—feeling the importance of our cause we should go forward in the strength of grace. Unlawful and violent agitation will accomplish nothing. Let us have strong arguments couched in soft words, and strong efforts put forth in a quiet manner, and we shall soon see the accomplishment of our hearts desire. The basis which we have laid down may not be the only one on which Union can be accomplished, or even the best one that can be devised, but we have
