"WE KNOW HOW" anywhere else for your money, an' now ye can't go to my stand."

"Got it 'thout money that time," chuckled Carrots, impudently, but still keeping a sharp eye his companion.

Theo flushed, and his fingers itched to pitch into the boy and give him a good drubbing, but he controlled himself, and said, quietly, "What's the trouble with you, Carrots? Are you too lazy to work, or what?"

The boy's eyes flashed angrily, as he replied, "See here, Tode Bryan—what ye pokin' yer nose int' my business for, anyhow?"

"Cause I can put you in the way of earnin' honest money if you're willin' to do honest work."

"What sort o' work?" Carrots inquired, suspiciously.

"I'll tell ye 'bout it when I'm sure you're ready to take hold of it, an' not before. See here, Carrots, I've seen you lately loafin' 'round with some o' the meanest fellers in this town, an' if you don't keep away from them you'll find yourself where some of 'em have been a'ready—behind the bars. I mean well by ye, an' if you make up your mind to be a man instead of a tramp an' a loafer, you can come to me, an' I'll give ye a start. Jim Hunt'll tell ye where to find me."

The night shadows were falling now and the street lamps were already lighted, and seeing this, Theodore started up, adding, "It's later'n I thought. I must be off," and he hurried away, leaving Carrots looking after him in a much bewildered state of mind.

SPEEDY.

"Yes, in teaching stenography, we are strong on accuracy," said the business college professor. "How are you on speed?" "Well, the last girl we graduated married her employer in three weeks."

HE LOVED ABERDEEN.

A Chaplain lately returned from a base hospital tells of a dying Scottish soldier whom he was called up to see in the night.

The soldier assured the padre that he had arranged all his earthly affairs, thanked him for his ghostly administrations, and ended by saying that there was one question he would like to ask, and that the padre promised he would do his best to answer.

"Well, sir, ye've made me sure that I shall go to heaven, but wud it no be possible for me to pass through Aberdeen on ma way?"

WHO STOLE THE GLASSES?

Those who can appreciate the intense respectability of the Athenæum Club will relish this story from Frank Boyd's "A Pelican's Tale."

It appears that Bishop Thorold, Bishop of Rochester, and afterwards of Winchester, was one day lamenting to a fellow-churchman the loss of his gold-rimmed glasses. They were old friends, and he felt their going keenly.

"I can't think how it happened," said he. "I had them with me when I went into the reading-room of the Athenæum, and I only laid them down for a second or two while I searched my pockets to find a letter I wanted. When I looked for them they were gone!"

Then the good Bishop was asked who was in the room at the time as well as himself.

"That's the dreadful part of the story," he said, "for there was only present the Bishop of London, the Bishop of St. David's, the Archbishop of Canterbury and Mr. Gladstone!"
