

RICHEST WOMAN HAS HARD TIME

Mrs. E. H. S. Wilkinson Distinctly Peevish at Way Press Treats Her

"CHANGES HER MIND" But her Eyes Still Sparkle When she Thinks of Trip to U. S. A.

NOTTINGHAM, England, July 20.—Mrs. Edmund Henry Smith Wilkinson, the English spendthrift, who has dazzled Paris and London with the extravagant ways she spends the $30,000,000 she gets every year, is all put out over the way the newspapers have discussed her. In fact, she's almost angry enough to stay at home and never go anywhere again, not even to America—although her eyes still flash with excitement when someone mentions the United States.

Mrs. Wilkinson, in fact, has changed her mind about a lot of things in her unstinted purchase of Paris gowns and hats that gave her the name of "the best dressed woman in the world." Mrs. Wilkinson was said to have spent $40,000. Recently, when pinned down to it, she wasn't quite sure of that figure, but said anyhow, it was considerable money.

Then, too, she has changed her mind about buying a ship with gold bathtub, in which to travel to America. Instead, a recounting of what money she still has from the income from her forty hotels in England, has convinced Mrs. Wilkinson, and especially her much younger husband, that travel in a good up-to-date Atlantic passenger liner ought to be satisfactory, even for a modern Croesus.

But the thing that distressed Mrs. Wilkinson and makes her almost discard her longing to go to America to display on Fifth Avenue the jewels and clothes that have made her famous, is the way people talk about her. Referring to the criticisms in London newspapers of her extravagance, she said: "I think it is very naughty for people to write things like that about me. I don't deserve it, and it's my money, anyhow. People say such horrid things I feel as if I'd like to be a recluse and never go out again."

Mrs. Wilkinson's third husband pointed to the Paris models that were on display in their home and also the array of hats and said: "Well, if we like to spend a fortune on dress, it's good for the trade."

Among other things on display at the Wilkinson home were sixty hats from Paris. One of them is known as the "Romanoff Crown." It is crusted with pearls and, according to Mrs. Wilkinson, was purchased from the wife of the ex-tsar's secretary.

LOSES RIGHT HAND

Arm Caught Under Heavy Knife at Godfrey Cheese Factory.

KINGSTON—Lorne Genge, the seventeen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Genge of Godfrey, lost his right hand just above the wrist in a sad accident in the cheese box factory of Lesellie Clark at Godfrey. Genge was working on a machine used for cutting the bands of the cheese boxes which consists of a heavy knife operated by machinery which cuts a number of the bands at once. He had sent through a number of the bands for the first operation and it appears that they caught in some manner preventing him from turning them for the second operation. He reached in under the knife to free the bands and it descended on his arm before he could remove it, catching it just above the wrist. The member was almost completely severed before the machinery could be stopped, and Mr. Bush rushed to the assistance of the injured workman and rendered first aid, applying a tourniquet above the elbow. Genge was then able to walk to a house about 400 yards from the mill, and a telephone message brought a physician from Verona.

WHAT PRESS AGENTS PROMISE

FAMOUS PLAY PICTORIZED

Dorothy Dalton's new Paramount photoplay, "Half an Hour," which will be shown at Griffin's tonight for the last time, is based on Sir James M. Barrie's famous play of the same name which was produced with immense success several years ago. This is the second of Sir James' great plays which have been picturized by Paramount, and others will follow.

Miss Dalton has an excellent role in the picture and she is finely supported. Charles Richman being her leading man.

Johnny in a two-reel Torchy comedy, a beautiful Burton-Holmes Truvelogue, and George Seitz and Marguerite Courtot in a new chapter of the popular mystery play, "Velvet Fingers," are also being exhibited on the same program.

"THE HOPE" STIRS PROMISE OF NEW CINEMA THRILLS

One of the most spectacular productions of the season is promised in "The Hope" at Griffin's tomorrow to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. "The Hope" is a Metro screen version of the famous old melodrama by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, and it is reputed to have preserved all the thrills of the stage play with a lot more added in a way possible only to motion pictures.

Announcements lay special stress upon scenes which show an entire street in Italy being toppled into the ground in an earthquake. A skirmish supposed to take place in the Khyber pass between Afghanistan troops and British infantry provide the picture with moments of the most intense excitement.

An all-star cast headed by Jack Mulhall, Frank Elliott, Marguerite de la Motte and Ruth Stonehouse, will be seen in the production. Mr. Mulhall's role is that of the handsome and daring hero, Harold, Earl of Inglest. It is the role that was created in London by Frank Elliott, one of the "Royal Players." Mr. Elliott is now in the screen version, but this time, instead of the valiant Harold, he is the wicked Captain Hector Grant.

Larry Semon in a highly amusing two-reel comedy, "The Sultor," Fox News Weekly, and other worth while attractions will also be presented.

PRIEST HEADS NEW REBELLION

Antagonist of Notorious Rasputin Rises Again in Russia

CONSECRATES SELF Every Sunday and on Each Feast Day all Churches Are Crowded

RIGA, Latvia, July 20.—The monk Hilarion (Heldorus), former preceptor and afterward antagonist of the notorious Rasputin, is again attracting attention in Russia by announcing his purpose to start a revolution in the Orthodox Russian church. Hilarion fled from Russia after his break with Rasputin in the early part of the war, but returned after the Bolsheviks gained control. He was unfrocked by the church.

His re-appearance in public in Russia was almost simultaneous with a revival of fervor in the Orthodox church, which the Bolsheviks now are trying to combat. In an address at the Tsaritsa (of which he was formerly abbot) he recently declared:

"I consecrate myself to the fight for the people's cause and to start a campaign against the popes (priests) which is to make a revolution within the church."

Every Sunday and on many religious feast days in Russia the churches now are crowded. Communists, themselves, are attending the services and this has brought down on their heads a warning from the government "not to set so bad an example for the peasants." On that subject, the Moscow Pravda says that some of the Communists even have used Soviet official automobiles to take their families to church services, weddings and christenings. The newspaper printed the following warning from the party heads:

"The Soviet power has no intention to compel anyone by forcible means to leave off the services of professional darkness, but the Communist party as a whole has a right and is bound to demand from its responsible members that they not only should not take part in religious ceremonies and services but should try by example and explanation to others to overcome all religious superstition. Every member of the party directly and openly should recognize and strengthen by the example of his own conduct the truth that religion and scientific Communism are absolutely incompatible."
