THE ANGLO-SAXON ALLIANCE.

, 1897, aggregate 119,105 tons.

There is no race in the world that are governed more by ideas than the Anglo-Saxon. This is shown in the English magna charta and the constitution of the United States and the reverence with which both are held by the people of these two nations. These documents contain the condensed governmental wisdom of the ages. They constitute organic laws and all enactments, no matter by what legislative body made, must conform to them or at least must not violate any of their provisions in any particular of the least importance. It is perfectly natural that such nations look to each other of peril for sympathy and help. They are practically of the same blood, have the same language and are influenced by the same ideas. It is no wonder therefore that an alliance is now talked of and that the utmost cordiality exists between them. the case long since were it not for the the lots upon which they build. foolish actions and utterances of a few

THE WEEK'S REPORT.

The event of the past week was unquestionably the wonderful assay of $2,040 from the Deer Park mine. This result of course was from a picked sample. However, this property is looking exceedingly well, and we predict a rise in the value of the shares almost immediately. Grand Prize, which adjoins the Deer Park and which is credited with having the same lead, we consider a good purchase.

Chinese Cordon, in 1863-4, during the Tai-Ping rebellion, when he led the evervictorious army, taught the Chinese a lesson on the necessity of drilling, discipline and military training that they should have heeded. With the use of these he put down that tormidable rebellion. The Chinese seemed to have set no store by the example which General Gordon showed them, and went into the war with Japan with a badly drilled, poorly disciplined and badly officered army and navy, and the result was an ignominious defeat.
