OUR DAILY PATTERN

GIRL'S DRESS. By Anabel Worthington.

As pretty a little dress as ever you saw For a small girl is shown in this picture Inst adding a tab to the top of a box plait made in each half of the front and back gores makes the two gore skirt a model of beauty; an embroidered belt passed under the tabs proves its use and decorative worth where the plain waist is joined. The collar and cuffs have pronounced style, and rows of braid to trim them add still more to the style merit of the frock.

There is big opportunity for hand embroidery on this model in silk or wool threads, if one prefers this to the braid finish. Braid is fashionable and will be the choice of the woman who has not the time for hard work. While the collar and cuffs, also the belt, are of contrasting goods, all one material may be employed. In this case the braid or embroidery will be in opposing color for effectiveness.

Wool mixtures, serges, gabardine, wool poplins and like fabrics are fashionable materials from which to make selection for this model. Serge with white bengaline or broadcloth in pale shades for copying this design, for it is simplicity braid. Or 2% yards 36 inch all one ma-
