The system of preparing the voters' under any circumstances. According was in a position to place on the list whomsoever he wished and leave off those whom he did not desire to see vote. As a result of this loose ness a terrific cry has been raised against the list as originally prepared. To quiet this row and for the evident purpose of keeping himself in good favor with everyone, if possible, Commissioner Ross has issued an arbitrary ruling which places on the lists at one fell swoop some six hun dred additional names.

Irrespective of the legal aspect the situation, it must be seen at a glance that the method by which the voters' lists have been prepared has absolutely nothing to commend it. Everyone who is at all familiar with the facts in the case knows perfectly on the lists is far in excess of the actual number of voters in the city. fall of 1900, there were in the neigh borhood of 800 votes east in the city of Dawson, and at that election universal suffrage prevailed.

There are almost double the above number of names on the voters' lists at the present time and certain qualifications are required which did not prevail at the former election.

The fault lies principally in the system which has been followed. No individual should be given the authority to arrange the lists as the assessor was permitted to do, and, on the other hand, the governor's action Berries' would be enough? Don't you in arbitrarily doubling the lists is suppose that everybody knows they open to equal criticism. Had a plan are for sale? of individual registration been followed, and each voter compelled to present himself at the assessor's office to have his name placed on record there would have been no diffi-

Under present conditions, the only manner by which a fair vote can be secured is to require each man as to whose qualifications there is the most shadowy doubt to take the elector's oath when he casts his bal-permit of tampering by anyone, for any purpose whatsoever.

The approaching election involves merely a practical business propos ition. Dawson is already an incorporated city, and it remains with the voters to determine what they want. An appointed commission will be a guarantee that the public business will be transacted with the utmost fidelity and that rigid economy w be observed in the expenditure of publie funds. An elected regime means that places must be secured for polittions handed out. The men who pay
