DENY THE DRUGGING.

The Defendants in the Paterson Murder Case. Tell Their Stories.

Counsel Attack the Dead Girl's Character—Trial Near by at an End.

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 17.—Counsel for the defense in the Jennie Boschier murder trial yesterday practically closed their case. W. A. Death, Walter L. McAllister and Andrew Campbell, the three men on trial for the murder, went upon the stand in their own behalf and told their versions of the event of the night Jennie Boschier met her death while in their company. Counsel for the three defendants made an attack on the moral character of the dead girl and claimed that the prisoners were in no way responsible for the death of Jennie Boschier. He denied that she had been drugged or that she had been ill-treated or assaulted.

The three defendants told practically the same story.

The summing up of the case will occur to-day and the case may go to the jury about sundown.

McAllister said that on the night of Jennie Boschier's death he and Kerr went into Sam's saloon, but had no expectation of seeing the unfortunate girl there.

Campbell came in from a side room and ordered the drinks. Campbell asked what he was doing there, and he told him that he had a little matter on hand. Campbell told him that Jennie Boschier was inside. He continued:

Campbell ordered a cocktail, cider and beer, and the drinks were taken. "Jennie came out, it was late in the evening. I went in, and in about 20 minutes told Kerr to go and get me a rig. Death and Campbell were then having a second round of drinks. I saw a bottle of champagne, and I took a quart bottle of champagne. Jennie was by that time drunk."

"When I first entered the room she staggered over toward me, and threw her arms about me and continued to hug me for several minutes. She finally became paralyzed drunk, and I thought the fresh air would do her good. Jennie was able to walk out to the back, but we had to support her. She said as she got in 'We are going out in the car, and she sat between two of us in the back seat."

"We drove to Lee's hotel, but that place was closed, and then we proceeded along the Rock road, and about the time we were driving the long drive would sober Jennie up. The girl on the way groaned and mumbled and moved about in the back."

The witness denied that he or anyone else had put anything in the girl's drink. He also denied that he or anyone else had taken liberties with the girl.

Death, another of the accused, followed McAllister on the witness stand. His testimony did not differ materially from McAllister's.

Death said he met Jennie on the street and took her to Sam's saloon. There she drank a cocktail, an absinthe and several glasses of wine. McAllister poured out wine. Jennie acted in a drunken way when McAllister came into the room, and she put her arms around McAllister's neck. The champagne made her worse. In the back Jennie became sleepy and Campbell put his finger into her mouth in order to make her vomit. She vomited on Campbell's neck and McAllister's handkerchiefs. She seemed to be in pain while she was vomiting.

"You heard Detective 'Bitts' testimony and you heard him say that you spoke of Jennie and dope. You said that by dope you meant knockout drops."

"I said the girl dope after she had drunk absinthe."

Witness said in answer to a question that he did not assault Jennie on the night of her death, nor did McAllister nor Campbell.

"Did you put anything in her drink or did you know of anyone else doing so?" "No, sir."

On cross-examination Death said that he did not tell the officers when arrested of the effect of the drink upon Jennie or the words she said in court. He said that he was so excited that he did not know what he was saying to the officers. He had only told the whole story to his counsel and in court.

Andrew J. Campbell, the third defendant was then placed on the stand. His account of the occurrences in the saloon and during the remainder of the night was practically the same as that given by McAllister and Death.

In reply to a question by his counsel as to the drinking in the saloon Campbell said: "I saw nothing put into any of the glasses other than the drink."

On cross-examination Campbell denied telling the detectives that the contents of a bottle he saw McAllister have would make the girl lively. The only bottle he saw in McAllister's hands that night was the champagne bottle.

Campbell denied he ever said McAllister was the first to assault the girl. No one asked the driver to participate in the assault. He did not see either Death or McAllister take any portion of her underclothing.

Dr. Charles J. Loffer, of New York city, testified that he had seen persons "knocked out" by absinthe. Much would depend on whether a person was accustomed to take it and upon an almost empty stomach the drink would cause excitation and this would be followed by total collapse.

Prosecutor Emly then asked: "If a person had died after having taken absinthe and chloral was found in the stomach, what would you say she died of?"

"From chloral poison," replied the witness.

The case for the defense was then closed.

Prosecutor Emly got Campbell to deny specifically each item in the confession said to have been made by him on the night of his arrest. This alleged confession was ruled out yesterday. Detectives Lord, Titus and Taylor were recalled and each swore over the same ground. Where Campbell had denied they affirmed and what he affirmed they denied. The testimony of the detectives closed the rebuttal and taking of testimony.

In his butcher shop on Head street Frank Hallman has the carcass of a calf four months' old that dressed 400 lbs. The animal was raised by Saleen Arnold, of the 3rd Con., Chatham Tp. It was of the Durham breed.

In a letter to the Department of Crown Lands, Toronto, Mr. Herbert Gardiner, one of the official caretakers of the Rondeau Provincial Park, gives some account of the game in that reserve. After remarking that the deer were looking reasonably well, he said that it took him more than a week to induce the large buck to come into the enclosure for the winter. There are now 100 pheasants in the park of the English and Mongolian varieties. Mr. Gardiner proposes to let two or three game clubs yearly have a small number of pheasants for the sake of propagating them. He asks the Department's opinion on the question. Some of the pheasants will be let out all winter, in order to get them acclimated.
