

terminated not to be debarred from their favorite pastime of promenading the principal thoroughfares. The line of boulevard from the Madeleine to the Chateau d'Eau is thronged with people of every class—bourgeois, soldiers, priests, workmen, and their "sisters, and their cousins, and their aunts"—all bent on showing that if the Boeuf Gras is a thing of the past, the holidays are not. One, which has been threatening all day, began to fall about four o'clock, not, perhaps, to the entire displeasure of the cab proprietors who will have reaped a rich harvest. To say that the fancy dress which used to be seen in such profusion on this occasion have entirely disappeared would perhaps be going a little too far; but they are now chiefly restricted to children, who take great delight in appearing in public as Pierrots or shepherdesses. I saw a small boy of about four years of age in the full dress of a colonel of hussars, sword, Legion of Honor, and all complete, his small face beaming with pleasure when some good-natured soldier respectfully saluted him. The few cars filled with goddeses, warriors, apes, and other favorite Carnival devices which are still to be seen, generally form the gigantic advertisement of some enterprising clothier or brewer, and the latter class, consisting of distributing glasses of beer gratis to all who asked for one; while a very prominent figure during the last day or two has been that of an immense baby, about ten feet high, sitting on the top of a van taking nourishment out of a bottle filled with red wine. During the three "jours gras" two performances a day are given at all the theatres, and the latter class of the establishment most frequented by the working classes will be held to-night.

M. Crimieux, the Senator who died last week, was a man of powerful eloquence. He was a day after M. Berryer, he rose and began thus: "I have to speak, but I am all attention—a 'debut' which produced a remarkable effect. He was, indeed, so full of emotion that he was unable to proceed, and the sitting had to be suspended for quite half an hour. On another occasion he was so thoroughly convinced of the innocence of his client that, addressing the jury, he exclaimed, 'I know not what decision you are about to take, but I am so certain that this man is not guilty that if you condemn him, I shall conclude that I have defended him badly and read before you my robe, and new pledge.' Such strong argument had the desired effect, and the accused was triumphantly acquitted. When he was the Rue Bonaparte, and was still a lawyer, M. Crimieux had two secretaries whose careers have been very different. M. Laurier and Gambetta. It is related that a friend who was in the habit of visiting frequently at his office, asked him one day if he was pleased with their capabilities. "Yes, and no," he replied; "that one, pointing to Laurier, is very intelligent; but the other, Gambetta, I do not think fit for much, and all that he has been able to get him to do, so far, has been to address my envelopes." If this story were authentic it would furnish one more striking example of the mistakes to which even the most like M. Crimieux are liable. M. Naquet is the champion of divorce in these days, but it will not have been forgotten that M. Crimieux prepared a bill in 1848, and was for some time a warm supporter of the measure. One day, however, the bill was suddenly withdrawn, and M. Crimieux was why, until M. Crimieux himself explained the cause. "Que voulez-vous?" he said, with a laugh. "My wife took it into her head that I advocated divorce on her account. I could not get any one to do anything, no one obeyed me, till at last I had to give in and withdraw my bill."

The Herald Relief Fund Committee.

Brief Biographies of the "Herald" Relief Committee—Isaac Butt's Successor—Dr. McCabe, Archbishop, Schoolmaster and Patriot—A Typical Irish Gentleman—Prof. Baldwin, Chief of the Agricultural Department—An American Divine.

London, March 3.

The donors of the fund will be glad to know that the gentlemen who are on the committee and are charged with the distribution occupy positions of high social influence. They are all Irishmen except Mr. Heworth. They are eminently qualified by long experience and intimate knowledge of the distressed districts to use the money to the best advantage. The money which has been so generously given by citizens of the United States will do incalculable good to relieve the terrible distress. No committee of wiser, more cautious or more prudent men could have been selected. Oppressed by engagements which more than occupy their time, they have nevertheless signified their willingness to make any sacrifice in order to be instrumental in relieving the terrible want by which their suffering and starving countrymen are oppressed.

MR. SHAW, M. P.

The chairman of the committee is Mr. Shaw, who is about fifty years old. He is the leader of the home rule party and the successor of Isaac Butt. He represents county Cork, is a large landed proprietor and has great political influence. When he speaks in the House of Commons he is listened to with marked attention on both sides. He is respected everywhere as a man of large views and great political wisdom. He has entered into the work of the committee with great enthusiasm. He proposes to make a personal visit to the most distressed districts in company with the visiting committee, which consists of Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Heworth.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF DUBLIN.

Cardinal McCloskey could hardly have made a better selection than his choice of Dr. McCabe, Archbishop of Dublin, as his substitute. He is about fifty. He has the entire confidence of all bishops and priests in Ireland, and is an ardent lover of his native land, being known on both sides of the Atlantic as a scholar and patriot. At present he is in Ireland, and is expected to be in Ireland in a more permanent manner. Although overwhelmed with work of a large and very important diocese, he has accepted the invitation to act with the committee. He telegraphs: "I will with pleasure act for Cardinal McCloskey. I am sure your committee will not allow its funds to be diverted from the cause of charity to sectarian purposes." He is an invaluable accession to the ranks, his residence being Dublin, where future meetings of the committee will be held. He will always be available for conferences, where his wisdom and prudence cannot fail to be of great value in the conduct of the great charity.

COLONEL KING HARMAN, M. P.

Colonel King-Harman is a large landowner in Ireland. His demesne is Rockingham, one of the finest in the county. He represents county Sligo, and is a conservative home-ruler, a typical Irish gentleman and an ardent patriot. He was educated at Eton. He is exceedingly popular in the county which he represents. Wherever his name is known his genial influence is felt. He has given himself to this work with enthusiasm, and has to leave many important engagements in order to be of greater use to the committee.

PROFESSOR BALDWIN.

Professor Baldwin is an exceptionally valuable man on account of his large experience and knowledge of the districts covered by the famine. He holds a government position, being at the head of the Agricultural Department of Ireland. He was recently appointed assistant commissioner for inquiring into the condition of Ireland. Soon after his appointment he was presented with a congratulatory address, signed by many of the most influential members of both political parties. He is a man of great force of character. While by no means what can be called an enthusiast, he is exceedingly earnest, and has many times travelled through the length and breadth of Ireland, in the last four months alone covering 17,000 miles. He is thoroughly acquainted with the peculiarities of the people, and is regarded as a very important and valuable member of the committee.

REV. GEORGE H. HEWORTH.

Rev. Dr. George H. Heworth is well known to the American public as a scholarly New York clergyman, formerly pastor of the Church of the Messiah and subsequently of the Church of the Disciples. He is forty-seven years old, is a native of Boston, a graduate of Harvard Divinity School, and was a chaplain on the staff of General Banks in Louisiana. He has published two or three works, chiefly of a war experience, is distinguished as an essayist and for his practical knowledge of many charitable organizations. He has travelled long in Europe and is well acquainted with Ireland, its people and their needs. He will be recognized as a satisfactory representative of America in the great work of Irish relief.

Tragedy out West.

TWO WESTMORELAND MEN—UNCLE AND NEPHEW—KILL EACH OTHER.

Mr. Lafayette Somers and family, of Lute's Mountain, Moncton Parish, removed to Dakota Territory last year, being induced to emigrate by the solicitations of his brother James (or Marvin), who had resided there some years. The following letter, written by Miss Amelia J. Somers to a friend in Moncton, and published in the Times, gives the particulars of a terrible tragedy in which her brother, father and uncle were participants:

BRULE CITY, DAK., Feb. 17.

DEAR FRIEND—Now sit down to write you a few lines of very bad news. We have lost our oldest brother. Poor Brad is dead. On the 13th day of Feb., father and Brad went out on the claim for far as they could go. I suppose Brad had told you of Jim (Marvin) Somers. He is that great uncle we started west to see. I will now tell you the rest of the shooting. Jim met father and Brad on the road, with hat and coat off and with a rifle and two revolvers and a ball full of cartridges. He stopped the horses and began punching them with the gun and then struck at Brad. Brad took the wagon stake from the wagon and waved off his blows. Then Jim (Marvin) stepped back and shot Brad. Brad fell, not dead, but he fell from his gun in time, so he started to run. Brad rose up on his knee, pulled on Jim (Marvin) with a shoe shooter, and shot him. He fell instantly dead. Father had nothing to do with the shooting. He was with him and either he shot Jim (Marvin). They fetched Brad home. He lived about one hour and a half after he got home. He died happy and easy, like a man, and not with a shot in the back. He saved father's life after he was shot.

August Flower.

The immense sale and great popularity of Green's August Flower in all towns and villages in the civilized world has caused many imitations to adopt similar names, and to reap a harvest for themselves at the expense of the afflicted. This medicine was introduced in 1868, and for the cure of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, with their effects, such as Stomachic, Costiveness, Sick Stomach, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Palpitation of the heart, vertigo, and all the ailments which result from a disordered stomach. Three doses will relieve any case of Dyspepsia. Two million bottles sold last year. Price 75 cents. Samples, 10 cents.

A LONG TIME TO SUFFER.

Twenty-five years of endurance with Catarrh, is a long period of annoyance and misery. Mrs. E. J. Flauder, of Manchester, N. H., after going through with it all, writes: "The Constitutional Catarrh Remedy has rescued me from intense suffering and almost the grave." This medicine is for sale by all druggists.

THE SUPPLY DERIVAT OF THE entire bodily economy is the stomach. There it is that the manufacture of blood goes on, and upon activity of the great digestive organs depends in great measure the well-being of the system. If its functions are interrupted by dyspepsia, biliousness and constipation supervene, the blood becomes meagre in quantity and poor in quality, the appetite impaired, nervous symptoms manifest themselves, and there is a loss of flesh and vigor. As a means of stimulating and invigorating the stomach, and restoring the normal state of things, Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine may be confidently relied upon by acridities, dyspepsia, and nervousness. Not only is it a tonic of well and certain merit, but a most agreeable one. Its purity is unquestionable and it contains no ingredient that can prove harmful to any one using it. It proves most efficacious in remedying weakness and nervousness when the directions are strictly adhered to. As an antiseptic, it possesses great value in curing Children and Fever, bilious remittent fever, and the minor material complaints, such as colds and ague, are eradicated by it, and the system fortified against their return. It is an article which bears a time-honored reputation and has proved its efficacy in numerous cases, well calculated to put the remedial value of any remedy to a crucial test. Refreshing sleep, increased muscular force, a gain in flesh and mental vigor, are the results of its use. It is a confidant. Intending purchasers should not forget to ask for the Quinine Wine prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto. Sold by all Druggists.
