Ireland's Immunity from Crime Ireland's Immunity from Crime.

I quoted the other day some facts from the Ulster Guardian showing, on the authority of the Judge's charges at the spring assizes, how free from crime Ireland has recently been. A Crown Prosecutor now writes to me from Dublin further pointing the moral by giving the exact figures. He shows that in 32 counties (excluding the cities of Dublin, Belfast and Cork, where crime was of a year normal type; there were only 138. Belfast and Cork, where crime was of a torry normal type) there were only 138 indictments, mostly of a very ordinary character. This number works out at only four a country, or thirty-five to each million of the population. My correspondent triumphantly asks, "Do the records of any country in the world exhibit such immunity from crime?"

A Boston school teacher received rather a shock the other day when she got an insight into the mind of one of her little scholars. The teacher had asked the children to write an answer to the question, "What do you wish to he when you are grown up?" be when you are grown up?"

One little pale-faced girl, with a prematurely old face, wrote this single sentence: "I want to be an old maid."

The Owen Sound police have communicated with the officers at Wiarton, as it is believed he is better known there. Whether the communication came from the provincial detective department or from the crown counsel is not known."

The new evidence the authorities have gathered will not in itself solve the myatery. A sledge hammer investigation before the corner's jury that will make all the witnesses tell all they know may be said to be the one hope of the detectives, just as it was when the inquest first began.

tives, just as it was when the inquest first began.

There are rumors that Luke Copple, who was employed as a delivery man at Hunt's grocery store, where Florence Kinrade ran to give the slarm after leaving Mrs. Hickey's house, might be able to tell something. The gossips say the police have heard of reasons for Copple's dismissal, but they know nothing about the evidence he may give. The Times called Mr. Hunt up this morning and asked him the reason ofr Copple's discharge, especially if it had anything to do with the Kinrade murder. He said, "On the afternoon of the tragedy I was down town talking to Magistrate Jelfs. We walked up King street, and the exwas about the murder were on the street before I reached home. After supper a customer came into the store and Luke got talking with the party. I did not like the way he was acting and ordered him out of the store. We have not spoken since. It was not on account of anything he said I discharged him.

Copple was employed at Hunt's grocery store for nearly seventeen years.

A Richmond, Va., despatch says: In quest of clues that may unravel the greatest murder mystery an officer of the attorney-general's department of Oatario has been in Richmond and Manchester several days trying to learn something of the history of Florence Kinrade, sister of Ethel Kinrade, who was murdered in her home in Hamilton, Ont., February 25.

chester several days trying to learn something of the history of Florence Kinrade, sister of Ethel Kinrade, who was murdered in her home in Hamilton, Ont., February 25. The crown officer learned that she did sing for some time in a Portsmouth choir, that she was for six weeks in Manchester, though she did not sing there, and now he is trying to discover if she was ever known in Richmond. Her own story about the crime has never been disproved and there have not been established any other clues on which to base another theory. The theory was advanced that Ethel was murdered by some one who had followed Florence from Virginia. Every clue is being worked to find that man or even to establish the existence of such a man.

In opening he said that while he did not believe in he said that while he did not believe in an indiscriminate mixing of religion, he had no hesitation in speaking in a Unitarian Church, as he believed that that church was one of the bright stars in religion's heaven. He did not believe in all its doctrines or teachings, but its Idealism is righteousness and therefore good. We each have a separate destiny to fulfil, he sead. In the course of his address he said that some of the fiercest conflicts in the history of the world have been over religion—people. world have been over religion—people fighting for what they believed was the ight one.
