BULGARIA. LONDON, Jan. 18. Hundreds of Bulgarian soldiers have been killed and a very large number wounded by the bombardment of Petritzi by a squadron of twenty-five French aeroplanes, according to despatches from Athens forwarded by a correspondent there of the Standard. Great damage was caused by the bombardment. The advice states that provisioning of the Bulgarian forces on the Gracoo-Serbian frontier is being conducted with the greatest difficulty owing to the condition of the roads due to the bad weather. The correspondent adds that the aviators report that the Bulgarian army at Gjevgeji is being provisioned from Vetessa district, the supplies being carried on the shoulders of peasants, whose service was commended for the purpose. Petritzi mentioned by the correspondent, is probably Petrich, 53 miles northeast of Salonika.

The Ryndham sailed from New York on Jan. 15th for Poughkeepsie, and passed the Lizard on Jan. 14th. The accident evidently occurred at some point in the English Channel. The Ryndham belongs to the Holland-American line and has been in the service a number of years between New York and Rotterdam. She has accommodations for 2,326 passengers. The Ryndham is proceeding to London under her own steam. The nature of the accident is not yet ascertained.

The Internal Nerves

The Nerves Which Drive the Machinery of the Body—the Heart, the Lungs, the Digestive Organs.

You prick your finger and know that it is the nerves which carry the painful sensation to the brain. You move your hand, and realize that the idea of movement started in your mind. But did you ever think that every beat of your heart and every breath of air taken into your lungs is dependent on a constant supply of nerve force?

It is the internal or sympathetic nerves which drive the machinery of the body, and from their derangement or exhausted condition arises weakness of the stomach, feeble action of the heart, or inactivity of liver and bowels.

When nerve force fails every organ of the body becomes more or less deranged. Indigestion, sleeplessness, headaches, irritability and nervousness are some of the first indications.

You lose energy and ambition, find your work a drudgery, and grow weak and listless. As time goes on you become more and more helpless, until nervous prostration or collapse bring you to the sick bed, and long months are often necessary for the restoration of the exhausted nervous system.

Even in this extreme condition Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will usually cure if its use is persisted in, but how much wiser it is to heed the warning in the early stages and keep the nerve force at high-water mark.

No restorative has ever proven its worth in so many thousands of cases as has Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. What it has done for others it will do for you under similar conditions. By forming new, rich blood it nourishes the starved and depleted nerves back to health and vigor, and thereby overcomes the cause of weakness and diseases of the nerves.

"I speak confidently," he said, "because I feel so. If he doesn't go willingly I will carry him there."

It was said half-jestingly, but she took him all in earnest.

"He is pretty big; but I fancy that if you told him you were Sir Lionel he would be glad to go."

"Would he, though? Is my name so potent? Gad, I will make some use of it, then, while I may, for London will be ringing with the other story to-morrow, and I shall be at a discount."

"I don't understand you," she said. "I am glad of it, my child. I don't understand myself. By the way that fellow is a long while answering his bell. Oh! there he is. Hurry up, doctor, there is a sick girl needs your assistance."

"Not a very courteous way of asking, my good man, but I don't object to telling you, particularly as I am told you will be hastened thereby. My name is Sir Lionel Warne."

"Sir Lionel Warne. Nonsense!" "That man! Open your door and take a look. I believe there are pictures enough of me on sale to make me a tolerably familiar figure. But whatever you come for, come quickly, for you are needed."

CHAPTER VI.

The young lady of society in London during the "season" has no morning. At any rate, the morning of ordinary mortals has no existence for her. She is dancing when the ordinary ones are thinking of getting up from their beds, and she is getting up when they are eating dinner.

She sleeps until she has had all the sleep she wishes, and then the watchful maid brings her a cup of hot bouillon, which she sips while she thinks of rising. And when she is risen she is—well, groomed is the only word that fully expresses the process of preparation she goes through. There is first the toilet bath, and then the cold plunge; after that the brisk but soft drying, followed by a gentle massage movement. Then she is reading, while her hair is being "put up," and her clothing is being put on. By this time her breakfast is ready, and she is ready for it.

It was after just such a treatment as this that Lady Flora entered the breakfast-room, where her mother awaited her. No sleep, languid, unkempt maiden was she, but a bright-eyed, clear-skinned, alert young woman, whose creamy, clinging morning-robe fitted her as artistically as her most elaborate evening dresses. The tint of the rose was on her cheek, and her lips, like twin cherries, glowed against her white skin.

Lady Dareleigh looked at her critically, much as a jockey might scan a race-horse, on which he had staked his all; but she could find nothing amiss, from the stately, elastic set of the proudly poised head, with its royal crown of burnished tresses. The servant had gone immediately to bring in the freshly broiled chops and the newly made coffee, and there was no bar to free conversation.

"Success improves even you, Flora," said the countess, with an admiring smile, for there was no man in all the United Kingdom who admired more enthusiastically than the mother did her beautiful daughter.

"It was a success, mother," said Lady Flora, "and yet men are such fools! It is not difficult to beguile the shrewdest of them."

"Not for you, my dear; but you must not leave out of the account your beauty. Your wit is a great deal, but I assure you beauty paves the way for all things. Did you have a hard time with him? You were so tired last night that I did not wish to disturb you."

The short full skirt is undoubtedly the leader for all occasions.

"I DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE"

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pain I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 822 South 15th St.

When a remedy has lived for forty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their health to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Will you be so good as to continue the thanks of one and all to the people who have thus so materially contributed to the health, comfort and amusement of these fine men of Newfoundland.

Yours truly, (Signed) T. M. DEW, Major Commanding Newfoundland Contingent Association, 24th November, 1915.

NEWFOUNDLAND WAR CONTINGENT ASSOCIATION.

Visiting and Provision for Comforts of the Wounded.

(A) BY THE WAR OFFICE, 14th Hospital.

When the Executive Committee began its work in September, it felt that the first steps to be taken were—

(a) to establish a system which would give quick information to the wounded men in this country, and to the hospital to which they were sent;

(b) to secure an arrangement whereby the men would, as far as possible, be concentrated in one hospital, both for the sake of their own comradeship and for the sake of the kindness and welcome which they would receive after them; and

(c) to secure the services of those interested who would be willing to visit the men.

Through the kindness of Sir A. Gough, the Director-General of Medical Services at the War Office, Sir James Russell, the authorities have agreed so far as possible to concentrate the wounded Newfoundlanders in the 3rd London General Hospital, Wandsworth. It has not been possible to adhere to this entirely, but the figures below of the men in different English hospitals as at December 18th, 1915, show that a majority are at Wandsworth.

This hospital is one of the best managed and most comfortable in the country, and the kindness and welcome given to the men is of the highest quality. The Committee have been greatly aided by the kindness and willing co-operation of Colonel B. W. Porter, the Officer in charge.
