STEER BROTHERS.

Was Too Fervent.

LAW SAW MORE LOVE THAN RELIGION IN MAN'S KISS.

The islanders of Lewis, the island in the western Hebrides, off the coast of Scotland, which is coming so much into prominence since its recent purchase by the soap king, Lord Leverhulme, have many quaint customs, one of which was strikingly revealed in an action for divorce tried in court at Edinburgh. The story is well told in the judgment pronounced by Lord Sands.

The action was at the instance of Alexander Matheson, fisherman of Portnaguran, Stornaway, against Mrs. Isabella McLean or Matheson, 6 Portnaguran, and against William Campbell, merchant, 9 Portnaguran, as co-defender. His lordship granted a decree of divorce and found the co-defender liable in expenses and £40 damages.

His lordship said he thought it was proved that, considering their previously distant relations, there was a remarkable intimacy between defender and co-defender. The co-defender kissed the defender both when they were alone and in her house before her children. This in itself would have been conclusive had it not been for the co-defender. The defender and the co-defender were both members of the United Free Church. There was evidence that could not be disregarded that there was a certain practice of kissing between communicants, though in deference probably to British ideas, the salutation seemed to pass only between persons of opposite sexes. The existence of such a practice seemed somewhat startling, but his lordship thought it was explained by the evidence taken in relation to what was a matter of public knowledge among those conversant with religious conditions in the highlands.

It had been the practice for only a mere handful of the adherents of the church to participate in communion, although the communion season was a far more solemn action in the highlands than in the lowlands.

Since the split in the Free Church, however, in 1900, the sections which adhered to the United Free Church had tended to become much more like their brethren in the south, and thus it manifested itself among other ways in many younger persons becoming communicants. This caused an awkward complication as regarded the kissing custom. It might be all very well for elderly saints to greet one another with a chaste oriental salute, but it was a different matter when it came to young married women being promiscuously kissed by casual male acquaintances who happened to be fellow communicants. This extension of the custom was therefore disapproved of by many, but to a certain extent the custom prevailed. Such being the state of matters, the kissing indulged in by the parties to this case had not the conclusive character of undue familiarity.

It was proved that the co-defender did more than kiss the defender; he also put his arms around her, a fact which he admitted. His lordship felt that religious custom did not justify this extension of the embrace.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Gentlemen,—Last winter I received great benefit from the use of MINARD'S LINIMENT in a severe attack of LaGrippe, and I have frequently proved it to be very effective in cases of inflammation.

When Meteors Hit Us.

Earth, that is the world we live on, gains weight at the rate of about seventy pounds per minute. To be exact, the extra weight is 4,350 pounds hourly, or 59 tons per day. In a year the accumulation is 11,435 tons.

Sounds a lot, does it not? Yet as a matter of fact it is but a "flea bite." It only amounts to a couple of ounces per acre annually.

This increase comes sifting down, mainly in the shape of fine dust, from the meteors which are constantly striking our atmosphere and getting burnt up into small particles.

Sometimes a meteor comes along that is too big to burn up. Some years ago one exploded over Iowa and later there were picked up over 6,000 pieces, some running to 437 pounds in weight.

The biggest meteor that is known to have hit the earth fell at Cocon Mountain, Arizona. It made a hole which even now is 560 feet deep, and three-quarters of a mile across. The meteor itself is buried far below.

What are meteors? One idea is that they are the remains of a planet which was once a member of the solar system and somehow blew up. Anyhow, meteorites have been found which contain remains of fossil sponges and of other forms of life similar to those found in our own rocks. They are also iron, nickel and many other of our common metals. In fact, their composition seems similar in all respects to that of our own planet.

More than one has been found that contains diamonds, both black and white, and there is a scheme afoot to dig down to the monster of Cocon Mountain and mine it for the diamonds which it is supposed to contain.

Just Folks. Edgar & Guest.

THE HELPFUL MAN. Seems like he lived his life to see Just how much use a man can be. A helpful feller—that's his style. Making things easier all the while. Even the dogs would limp to him. With splintered foot or broken limb. As though they understood an' knew That something for 'em he would do.

Trouble? He never spoke the word. At least nobody ever heard Him utter one complaint that he Was overtasked. He seemed to be Delighted if you ask for aid. An' if he knew that he had made Your path a little easier, then He was the happiest of men.

His purse was open all the time. He often said it was a crime The way folks borrowed day by day. What very seldom they'd repay. But he'd just smile an' tell us all His loss was really very small. An' he would rather lose than feel His heart was gettin' cold as steel.

When folks were sick, to him we'd go. Because we knew that he would know Just how they were. He'd been to see As we'd have done, if only we Were half-way like him. But we found him easier with him around. We let him do the things we knew Down in our hearts we ought to do.

An' now he's gone, an' never more We'll find him smilin' at our door. Or hear his voice. Now all our care Without him we shall have to bear. When trouble comes or thing goes wrong, We wonder how we'll get along. How shall we stand to sorrow's touch Without the friend who did so much?

Mainly About People.

Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court has reached the age of 75 years. He is in excellent health and vigorous for a man of his years. Under the law he is eligible for retirement, but he doesn't seem to desire to quit work yet for a while.

Ellinor Glyn, who periodically attracts the literary world with sensational fiction, has come to the United States to study the American men. She has a good opinion of them as husbands to start with, for they are not hunting and shooting all their spare time. Women with the balls will become less subtle and cunning because now they can fight their battles in the open.
