

The Foster Brother;

The Orphan of the Wreck.

CHAPTER XXXI.
THE END OF THE MOOR.

"Another providence, Harry," said George, as they struggled in silence through the snow, the intensity of their feelings raising them almost beyond the sense of fatigue.

"Say two providences in one," returned Harry. "But for the snowstorm, which has arrested their course, they would have carried Lilla beyond our reach; and but for our accidentally stumbling on Jamie Welsh we should not have known of their departure."

"Right," rejoined his friend; "but what must Lilla have suffered—what must she be suffering still—deeming as she must that we have forsaken her, and that no help can now come to her?"

"Hush, George! for God's sake, don't speak of that! I have tried not to think of it, for it maddens me; and the only thing which prevents the heat in my brain from turning into scorching fire is the knowledge that joy and deliverance are now near her. We must come up with them; they cannot possibly have been able to proceed."

"That is indeed my hope," replied George.

"Your hope! Your certainty, you mean," added Harry, quickly. "You have no doubt in the matter, have you?"

"Well, yes, I have."

"What! Merciful heaven, George, what mean you?" exclaimed Harry, standing suddenly still, and gazing into the other's face with a look of horror.

"I mean that we may not find them at this inn on the moor—that is, if the road they had to go is level and unenclosed, for in that case the wind would sweep it clear of snow, rendering their progress quite practicable. Do you know the locality—do you know if there are hollows or wooded fences?"

Harry smote his forehead, and uttered a deep groan.

"So far as I remember," he said, in a voice of agony, "the road is flat and bare as far as the inn, and right across the moor."

"Then in that case we may depend on it that they have proceeded."

"And we shall follow," shouted Harry, with wild vehemence. "We can get each a horse and gallop in their track. Beyond the moor the snow would lodge in the road between the fences and block it up. George, George, we must overtake them. Cast no doubt on that fact or my reason will leave me."

"Overtake them we shall at some point, and that at no great distance either. I should think I only mentioned this possibility because I saw you committed so securely on finding them stayed at the inn. And, indeed, I do fervently hope they are no farther.—Ha, which path do we take now?"

This question was asked in consequence of their arrival at a pretty high stone fence which ran at right angles with the direction they had hitherto followed. It seem to form what is called a march dyke between two estates, and stretched away to south and north, while another stone fence on the other side ran in pretty much the same direction as that by the side of which they had come.

BREAKFAST—EPPE'S COCOA—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills.—Chlor Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Each packet is labelled "James Eppe & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London." Also, makers of Eppe's Milky Cocoa (Cocoa and Condensed Milk.)

Over-exertion, either of body or mind, produces debility and disease. The usual remedy is to take some stimulant, the effect of which is the same as giving a tired horse the whip instead of oats. The true way is to fortify the system with a permanent tonic like the Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of iron), which gives strength and vigor to the whole system.

Mansion House, Baltimore, Md., 26th October, 1871.—Mr. James I. Fellows—Dear Sir: I have just finished the tenth and last bottle of your estimable Syrup of the Hypophosphites. To its use I ascribe cessation of cough, of sharp pains in my back and chest, and of copious expectoration. Also, return of appetite, buoyancy of spirits, increase of flesh and strength to perform my daily duties with a degree of pleasure unknown to me for a long time. The good I have experienced from it is beyond description, and I advise all persons afflicted with consumption not to delay a day in taking it. Feeling sure that were it not for your Hypophosphites, I would now be in my grave. Yours truly, Geo. C. Four.
