FIRE DESTROYS ROOMS OF FREE PRESS PLANT

Blaze Starting in Sporting Department Quickly Spreads To Nearby Rooms.

Fire of unknown origin partially destroyed the sporting department and telegrapher's room on the second floor of the Free Press plant Saturday afternoon.

The blaze started in the sports department and quickly spread to the composing and editorial departments. Books and papers in the sports room were burnt, as were cuts and pictures valued at thousands of dollars. The telegraph instruments in the next room were rendered useless.

One young lady, deferring her exit to the very last, was forced to jump from the window on the third story.

The fire department answered quickly, and the fire was soon extinguished. Chief Aitken sets the damage at between $3,000 and $4,000.

NOTED ACTRESS VISITS LONDON.

Maude Fealy, the distinguished visiting star, who will be seen in the role of Marcelle in William Brady's greatest success, "The Man Who Came Back," this week's offering of the Garry McGarry players at the Grand.

Great American Actress Comes To Grand This Week

Miss Maude Fealy Stars in "The Man Who Came Back."

LIKES LONDON

Has No Use For Liquor, and Does Not Smoke Cigarettes.

Maude Fealy, whom critics say is one of the most gifted stars on the American stage, arrived in London last night from New York to play Marcelle in William Brady's great success, "The Man Who Came Back," at the Grand this week. She was quite tired from the long train journey when The Advertiser interviewed her at the Tecumseh House, but her roguish face brightened when she was asked to tell of her work, and her interest in Canada, and especially its people, was quite genuine.

Miss Fealy remarked on the stability of London. "It's trees were beautiful," she thought, and Queen's avenue was especially attractive.

That Ontario has prohibition is news to her. She has heard people say they were going to bring back a bottle or two of Scotch and so surprised Ontario was "wet."

Her declaration that she was in sympathy with prohibition was indeed convincing, and she told from her own observations how she had seen many good homes wrecked by liquor. She abhors it, she asserted. Good port wine is different, and Miss Fealy was quite frank about her views on the subject, when she said that she enjoys a glass once in a while.

Comedies Appeal.

Reverting to the theatre, Miss Fealy said that people are the same the world over. Comedies are more appealing than serious plays. The individual goes to the theatre to see romance. He goes that he may imagine himself, while he would like to be, to have his ideals freshened, and not to have the realism of life thrust upon him. They come to him in everyday life.

Miss Fealy's auburn hair bespeaks the fact that she is of Irish descent. Her wide blue eyes that sparkle with intelligence, and her master of the British Isles. She smiles not only with her lips, but with her whole face, and her interviewers believed her when she said that she had trained herself to be an optimist. That she seeks the humorous side of things more apparent as she talks to her.

Confessing a real love of the British public, Miss Fealy pointed out that in the British Isles the theatre is an institution and commercialism in art over there is far less striking than in America. A student of Shakespeare takes a real delight in portraying roles created by the master of drama. She related without the slightest touch of boastfulness but with a little pride how Sir Henry Irving had seen her in Buffalo and had engaged her as his leading woman to play the roles Ellen Terry had played. She played Rosalinde in Tennyson's "Becket" in Liverpool, and her British repertoire included "The Merchant of Venice," "Waterloo," "Louis XIV." When she was 13, she played Juliet in this country and she hopes she may be given the opportunity of appearing in a Shakespearean production here.

Does Not Smoke.

"I don't smoke cigarettes," and between laughs she explained that one reason was that they did not taste sweet. Maybe it would be different if the ends were sugared, she wasn't sure.

Born in Memphis, Tennessee (with an artful twinkle in her eyes she would not tell the year), Miss Fealy played children roles at three. Her mother was also a leading woman and today conducts a school of dramatic art in Denver. She gave Douz Fairbanks his first dramatic lesson.

Miss Fealy's movie experience, while not long, must have been successful for she starred opposite Theodore Roberts under Lasky, and produced "The Legend of Providence," and "The Friar" herself.

A lover of golf, she announced her intentions of playing on the local links this week. In fact she offered to show her interviewer, who has a district dislike for the game, some of the rudiments of the pastime.

Gives Tidy Sum To Relief Work

Special to The Advertiser: Samia, June 1.—It was announced today that the net proceeds of the carnival staged under the auspices of the K. of P. amount to about $4,745, one-half of which will be turned over to the central relief committee of the city, in accordance with the arrangement made.

WOMAN IS HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Mrs. Samuel Hanover Has Face Lacerated in Mishap On Governor's Road.

One woman seriously injured and three children badly shaken up was the result of an auto crash on the highway yesterday afternoon, when a car driven by W. J. Bisley of Ingersoll, collided with an auto driven by Samuel Hanover of 5846 Casper avenue, Detroit, at Second street, Pottersburg.

Mr. Hanover was going west on the highway, following Mr. Bisley closely. On approaching Second street, Mr. Bisley signalled that he was going to turn to the right. Hanover evidently mistook the signal and looked for the car ahead to turn into the left and swung out to pass; with the result that both met in the centre of the road, the compact of the collision sending the Michigan car into the ditch. Mrs. Hanover was sitting in the front seat with her husband, and was hurled through the windshield, the broken glass cutting her left cheek from mouth to ear.

The injured woman was rushed to the hospital by a passing motorist, where the blood flow was stopped and the wound dressed. She was not allowed to continue the journey, although she protested that she was all right.

Mr. Hanover had with him, besides his wife, his four children and a friend, R. W. Moutiller, also of Detroit. They were on a tour through Western Ontario but the unfortunate accident will halt their journey for some time as Mr. Hanover is not in a condition to take an extended trip.

ANGLICANS URGED TO HELP COLLEGE

Rev. Principal Waller Begins Drive For $15,000—Letters To Follow.

The first appeal for the $15,000 needed by Huron College for work made necessary by the evacuation of the University of Western Ontario from the college grounds, was made yesterday morning in St. James' Anglican Church by Rev. Principal Waller of Huron College.

The head of the college explained that the money was needed for a new heating plant and the complete renovation of the building into quarters that would house not only divinity students, but Anglican students at the university, who were taking courses in arts and medicine.

Going back into history, the speaker stated that Western Ontario had been founded by the Church of England, and that Huron College was the divinity faculty.

The principal stated that $10,000 would be known as the alumni fund, and that from the income derived from the students in residence a similar fund would be formed to pay back the money which will form part of the endowment.

Bishop Williams, he said, was sending out a letter this week on behalf of the Synod committee in charge of the campaign.

Principal Waller showed how Huron College had been the main supply of clergy for the diocese of Huron, as well as sending many to other dioceses and foreign parts. At present half the parishes in Huron Diocese are manned by Huron College graduates. Without the work of a college the church would be very much handicapped in the supply of ministers for the parishes.

Principal Waller pointed out that it would be years before Huron College would have enough funds to build on the new university property, as it would take some $250,000. In the meantime it had been decided to renovate the present college, and he asked all present to help financially in the undertaking.

SPECIAL

Course Dinner in the Restaurant, 11:30 to 2. Quick Service, 40c.

June! The familiar strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, the fragrance of orange blossoms and bridal roses, beautiful dresses, radiant brides and bridesmaids, floating veils and bright showers of confetti—all these are a part of the glory that is June's.

The bride of June will enjoy choosing from the lovely things we have selected for her. Gowns of ivory silk or pastel-tinted georgette, silken hose and gloves and underthings. All these we offer her, high in beauty, low in price.

HER WEDDING GOWN

Her dreams and plans have long been centered around this day of days. The serene consciousness of perfection in her gown will make her happier still.

It may be a charming confection of lace and georgette in ivory tones. The finely pleated tunic is edged with silk lace and five frills of lace fashion the skirt. Size 36, $60.00.

Or it may be a French frock of white flat crepe with a graceful draped skirt.

and a mere suggestion of a sleeve. Crystal and silver beads embroider intricate designs at the shoulder, waistline and hem. Size 28, $67.50.

Perhaps it will be a simpler gown of white flat crepe with pleated frills and narrow pleated panels. Size 20, $50.00.

CHARMING DRESSES FOR BRIDESMAIDS

Rose-colored georgette interprets a filmy frock with a two-tier pleated skirt, pleated frills on the sleeves, and blouse panels edged with gold thread. Size 18, $35.00.

A georgette gown of palest peach color is simply trimmed with pin-tucking, draperies and gold beads. Size 20, $37.50.

Georgette in crystal gray and powder blue is interestingly combined with frosty silver lace and pleating. Size 18, $30.00.

An unusual dress of white georgette outlines the wide tucks of the skirt, the rolling V collar, and the sleeves with silk braid in gold and ivory. Size 18, $45.00.

FOR THE MOTHER OF THE BRIDE

For this important lady there's a lovely dress of navy blue georgette with narrow, slenderizing panels of cut steel embroidery. Size 40, $60.00.

Or a crystal gray georgette, embroidered in coin-shaped figures with crystal beads (for $52.00). Sand: crepe and thread-run lace form a clever dress with pleated panels and a tiny cape (for $79.00). A gown of lustrous black satin has a draped skirt and cape, and a triangular panel of metallic lace, vividly embroidered with jade, rose and maize (for $65.00).

Jap Kills Self Protests Insult

Man Commits Hari Kari Near U. S. Embassy Ruins.

Associated Press Despatch. Tokyo, May 31.—An unidentified Japanese today committed suicide in the street near the ruins of the U. S. embassy, destroyed in the earthquake and fire of last September, as a protest against enactment of the United States immigration law excluding Japanese from the United States. The Japanese, who was apparently about 40 years old, was dressed in the formal dress of a Japanese gentleman, committed hari kari with a short sword in the fashion prescribed by ancient custom. The incident has created a sensation in Tokyo despite efforts of the police to suppress details.
