shown in great variety.

The silk department this year is particularly complete. Mr. Kennedy, the manager of this part of the business, spent three months in the European markets and secured the first choice of everything he wanted. One feature of the silk display is that there are no two costumes alike; and in many cases these costumes have no counterparts in Canada. In aliks, brocades are largely shown in the light shades. Duchess satin is very popular in plain, and brocades in gold and silver. Novelties are also seen in mouseline de soil, 45 inches wide, embroidered the entire width in all the new shades. Crepes of this season have some distinctive features. The crepe sable does not crush or ruffle. All silk goods were bought to great advantage this season on account of the quiet state of the foreign markets.

In the millinery department larger hats than have been exhibited for some years are now shown. Small hats are still sought after, however. The most popular colors this season are green tomato and bright yellow, grey and castor shades. In trimming jets will be used almost universally. Feathers from the largest gull's to the tiniest humming bird's are observed on hats. Flowers will be used this season only as dress trimming for evening wear. Feather boas, capes and ruffs are Flowers will be used this season only as dress trimming for evening wear. Feather boas, capes and ruffs are again popular. The display of furs is very fine. A combination of seal and blue fox is a new feature.

The gents' furnishing and hand and footwear departments are also complete. And in the mantle department great teste has been displayed. The opera clocks are very beautiful, and novelties are shown in mantle materials and colorings. Sealette and plush garments will also be much used.

The business has grown so much of late that warshouse No. 14 Colborne-street has been added to the already extensive establishment. This addition has been specially arranged for silks and has almost perfect lighting. GRAND OPERA HOUSE. A DUCK OF A BONNET.

The display of millinery is larger and more varied than ever. Large hats more varied than ever. Large hats as well as small are shown, trimmed with plumes, mounts, aignettes and jets in an endless variety of colors, prominent among which are banana green and black. Beaver hats have also a prominence. In bonnets one of the new shapes is the high cone crown and another is the perfectly flat with high back trimmings. In the mantle department the visitor sees splendid assortment of fur-lined circulars, ranging in price from $9 to $45, a large variety of capes, em'noidered and trime, med with fur, feathers and fringe.

Ladies' dolmans are shown is velvet, plush, silk and other materials. There is one line that attracts special attention. It is a combination of the dolman and cape and was designed by the house. Ladies' %-length coats embroidered handsomely and fur-faced are on display, also on display, also Children's wear is very pretty this year.

Children's wear is very pretty this year. The reefer jacket trimmed with brass buttons is one of the favorite shapes. There are also some very handsome long coats with full sleeves and girdle, and having the empire sleeve and collar embroidered.

The display throughout is one that is of great interest to ladies. The attendance of yesterday was very large, and will, no doubt. terday was very large, and will, no doubt, tinue to be so each day during the week.

Just compare the two for a moment and think, is it any wonder that Canada is not progressing as fast as he should when the paid officials of the country throw every obstacle in the way of disseminating the information we pay so dearly to obtain.

If we are to be treated in this fashion, abolish the department altogether—we would not then trust in a broken reed, but find out these things for ourselves.
