Brother A. J. Darroch, B.A., who hails from Bruce, tells us that he was raised on porridge, and Systematic Theology is in his blood. He found in the study of the doctrines generally and of the decrees in particular—(to many of us a maze of darkness) —a field for thought and discussion which possessed a charm all its own.

Brother C. H. Schutt, M.A., ever sought to place truths in their logical connection and to gain their true relationship.

Dr. Goodspeed and he have often wandered far in their interesting discussions upon the psychological and philosophical bearing of truth. We shall ever remember him as an accurate student, always ready to recite when called upon, and to question until convinced that the position taken by the author or the professor was satisfactory.

Brother R. Routledge, B.A., was Brother Schutt's true yoke fellow in this respect, and when they joined together in the support of any position taken on a question up for discussion, they brought forth arguments which were always forceful and worthy of consideration.

We feel especially proud of this member of our class. He is representing us well in the far south, and when "we bow our knees unto the Father," and pray for blessing upon us as a class, we shall ever remember in a special sense our noble consecrated and gifted Brother Routledge in Bolivia.

Brother G. T. Menge, B.A., was the metaphysician of '98. He has a genius for the discussion and elaboration of all truths which have about them a philosophical bearing, and could split hairs with mathematical accurateness. In New Testament Greek Prof. Farmer ever fell back upon him when all the rest of us had failed, and very rarely was he disappointed. We congratulate our class-mate upon obtaining the fellowship in Classics, and know that he will honor Class '98 Theology by the character of the work he is certain to perform in that department.

Brother D. Brown, the orator of the year, was by no means the smallest man of '98. He was ever a careful, thoughtful, inquisitive student. To him the study of theology was a sacred task. He had a high conception of the Gospel ministry, and all his classmates will admit he was one of the most consecrated of our number.
