"Every time the London, Ont., fire brigade responds to a fire it costs the city $100 on the wear and tear of the apparatus," said Ald. Eckert recently. "We should change our system. Purchase an automobile, that will get to the fire when it is in the early stages and save the horses and other apparatus. As it is now the chief can do nothing but order out every piece of apparatus whenever an alarm comes in." Evidently an automobile would be a true economy.
