

Canada has developed friendly ties with South Korea to the point where it has become our second-largest trading partner in the Asia Pacific region. Canada neither recognizes nor has diplomatic relations with the North Korean regime and has little commercial or other interests in the North.