

MONTRÉAL: GASTRONOMY, HOSPITALITY AND CULTURAL CAPITAL OF NORTH AMERICA

Long synonymous with exquisite cuisine and, thanks in large part to the French influence and cosmopolitan nature of the city, Montréal makes food and the art of dining a top priority.

Indeed, it is estimated that there are over 5,000 places to eat out in the Greater Montréal region, whether for a simple snack or inexpensive pub lunch to the ultimate in haute cuisine.

While French haute cuisine reigns supreme, the city offers a truly international range of places to dine. Discover and enjoy. And bon appétit!

Montréal also offers visitors a superb selection of hotel accommodations for every taste and budget, combining European flair with North American practicality.

The city's 50 biggest hotels boast 14,200 first-class rooms and those that are within walking distance of ICAO include such distinguished properties as the Hôtel Meridien, Hôtel Vogue, the Ritz-Carlton Kempinski, The Queen Elizabeth and the Château Champlain. All renowned worldwide for their warm hospitality.

And for those seeking a fascinating introduction to the history and the rich cultural and artistic heritage of Montréal, museums and galleries abound. With a Montréal Museums Pass, 17 museums offer highly diversified collections and world-class exhibitions enabling visitors to enjoy a wealth of discovery, culture and history. For one of the measures of any city considered to be truly international is the richness and diversity of its cultural institutions. And in this Montréal excels. →
