

AN HISTORIC SPOT

Montreal is interesting historically, for here—then the Hochelaga of the Indian—Jacques Cartier came in 1535, and Champlain chose the site of a city eighty-one years later. Here Maisonneuve fought hand to hand encounters with the red man; here was the headquarters of French trading and exploration through the trackless West; and here dwelt those fearless adventurers of the early days—

FROM THE TOWERS OF NOTRE DAME

La Salle, the discoverer of the Mississippi, Du L'hut, the founder of Duluth, Cadillac, the founder of Detroit, and Bienville, the founder of New Orleans, and others whose names are not forgotten in American history. Here Indian and French and British and American struggled for mastery, and in 1775 General Montgomery and the Colonial forces occupied the town for a short period.
