fpect oaft: llfo a y to ot far ce of m of oaft: crofs and Fhus Place But rfhes ot fo gues the dth; , its ve a forputs, ands Prodeand It is n of the (25)

the River which bears its Name, where the Bank is clevated above 60 Feet above the Water's Level. The Fort is Stone-work, laid out in the Form of a Square with four Baftions, and mounted with 40 Cannon. The Ramparts are of Earth, defended with large Stocks of Timber towards the Foffe. There is a Battery that commands the River. and no Danger is apprehended on this Side from any Attack by Ship Gurs, fince the Tide is fo ftrong as to hinder them from mooring at a proper Diftance from the Bank to do Execution. But towards the Land it stands on a Level with the Champaigne Country, and therefore is more exposid on that Side, and might cafily fir'd by Bombs from any Part, as all the Barracks and Magazines are of Wood, except that for Powder, which likewife, tho' built with Stone, is fcarcely Bomb Proof.

The River extends itfelf in a very flreight Courfe Eaft, almost as far as to Minas, and is navigable by large Ships 30 Miles into the Country, which is inhabited on each Side by the French, who are fettled in feveral pleafant Villages among the Meadows that lie on its Banks. There are reckoned to be about 300 Families of them, who are all aw'd'by the Neighbourhood of the Garrifon into good Manners, and a peaceful Behaviour, not daring to shew that ungovernable and refractory Spirit which posseful set reft of their Countrymen in these Parts.

D

The