

"The present age hates it. The self-deluded admirers of human progress turn their backs upon it. Socialists deride it. World reformers make light of it. The political Zionist hisses at it. The Church treats it with indifference, and oftentimes with opposition. Many good men, from motives of policy, avoid it, unable to refute it. It is not popular with the optimism of a false theology and a blooming anti-Christianity. But in multitudes of hearts it finds a home, and is welcomed as nothing less than the imperishable truth of God."

Robert Johnson
with the writer's best-wishes Sep 2nd 1903