Residents of North Toronto Complain of Officious Officialdom Since Town Was Annexed

A DUBIOUS ADVANTAGE

Question of Connecting Water Supply With City System Not Favorably Considered by Some.

The Ratepayers' Association of North Torento, having received permission from the city council to hold fortnight. ly meetings in the old town hall, the first meeting under the new order of hings was held Saturday evening, and Ex-President of Venezuela Must was fairly well attended. Ald. Risk, was fairly well attended. Aid. Risk, Rowland and Burgess were present. At the outset President Kleeberger read the executive committee's report, which was as follows:

"Your executive met last Thursday evening and roughly reviewed the municipal situation for the district since annexation date, and report as follows:

mands.

"Many complaints are also being made as regards the sewerage connections. It is claimed by some that they are not permitted to drain their cellars into the local sewerage system. It is claimed by others that they are not permitted to connect their down pipes from the roof into the sewers, both of which necessities the sewerage system is designed to meet, and we naturally fail to understand why there should be any prohibition whatever in these regards.

should be any prohibition whatever in these regards.

"We were also given to understand that Ald. Rowland has moved to have the North Toronto water supply connected up with the city supply without delay. This we submit would be a very debatable advantage to North Toronto. In fact, we consider it would be a very great disadvantage, and we consider this question one which our association should thoroly debate, and would suggest for our next meeting that we invite T. Aird Murray, Engineer James and others to address the no delay in meeting the district's traffic necessities, and have prepared a special memorial for your consideration.

"Signed on hehalf of your executive.

"John Kleeberger, president."

Cellar Drainage.

Discussing the clause of being refused permission to drain the cellar into the sewer and to allow the roof water to enter it, ex-Councillor Howe stated that the plumbing department of the city will not allow this, althowhen the sewerage bylaw was before the electors it was conditionally that this sewerage system would take care of the roof water and cellar drainage. He did not think the city had a right to override this bylaw until the city was prepared and ready to construct a storm sewer deep enough to allow of cellar drainage.

W. G. Ellis said that while this sewer bylaw was before the electors, its advantages were discussed from all standpoints by eminent men before the bylaw passed, and all adverse criticism was downed by Engineer T. Aird Murray, who asserted that this system of sewerage would be large enough to take charge of the roof water and cellar drainage. He considered it a hardship to have to go down to the city hall repeatedly without receiving any information, only to have a bylaw shoved under the applicant's nose.

J. M. Letsche recalled that when the sewerage plan was made and before the bylaw was submitted to the electors the plan was submitted to the electors the plan was submitted to the electors the plan was submitted to the city Engineer Rust stated that "this is the identical sewerage system he would advocate for North Toronto, even if the town were part of the city." He could not see why the system should be inadequate at once to use it for the purpose it was constructed.

Aid, Rowland thought that this matter should be threshed out by the proper authorities at the city hall. He was willing to take this matter in hand at once.

The "connecting the town with the city's waterworks system" was thee proper authorities at the city half. He was willing to take this matter in hand at once.

The "connecting the town with the city's waterworks system" was the next question to be discussed, and excouncillor Howe again was the leader, and opined that no obstacles should be thrown in the way of making this connection as speedily as possible, for there was no saying how soon the district might need this connection, unless the Lemonville water would be brought down by gravitation.

Artesian Water

E. V. Donnelly and others spoke on the subject of bringing the artesian well water down to the northern end of the city, and it was shown that experts reported on this scheme and showed that there was sufficient water up north which could be brought down by gravitation, which would supply the whole of the city north of Bloor street, which would be immensely cheaper than pumping the water up the hill. The aldermen were advised to look into this matter before another $7,000,-000 was spent.
