

The time, however, is fast approaching when the wealth, magnitude, and importance of the British possessions in North America will force their notice on England and its people, who will then learn with as much pleasure as surprise, that their colony, known under the general name of Canada, is an empire of the West, inferior only to that of the United States.

N. A. WOODS.

GROVE HILL,
January 2, 1861.