

	PAGE
Surprise of the British	216
Gage orders an attack. Courage of Prescott and his band	217
Landing of British troops. State of Prescott's defences	218
Ward avoids a general action	219
Spirit of the army. Seth Pomeroy. Joseph Warren	220
Men of Essex, Worcester, and Middlesex counties join Prescott	221
Stark completes the line of defence to the Mystic	221
Putnam's orders. Number of Howe's forces	222
Number of the Americans in the engagement. Free negroes	223
Charlestown set on fire. Howe's first attack	223
Conduct of Prescott. The British attack. Their reception	224
The British near the rail-fence reeol. The second attack	225
They are again driven back	226
The third attack on the redoubt	227
Prescott, in want of powder, gives the word to retreat	228
Putnam takes possession of Prospect Hill. Prescott at headquarters	229
The British make no pursuit. Their loss. Loss of the Americans	229
Death and character of Warren	230
British and American opinions on the battle	231

CHAPTER XV.

THE ARMY ROUND BOSTON.

June 17-August 1775.

Effect of British losses. Election of American major-generals	232
Gates chosen adjutant-general and brigadier	234
Thomas Jefferson enters congress. Further election of brigadiers	234
Washington leaves Philadelphia for the army	235
Washington and Tryon in New York	236
New York plan of accommodation	236
Congress emits bills of credit, and authorizes the invasion of Canada	237
Congress sets forth the causes for taking up arms	237
Second petition of congress to the king	238
Addresses to the people of Great Britain and to London. Richard Penn	238
Washington takes the command at Cambridge	239
Sufferings of the inhabitants of Boston	240
Number of the British army, and of the American	240
Washington introduces reforms. Lee negotiates with Burgoyne	241
Organization of government in Massachusetts. Continual skirmishes	242
How the army is supported. Washington's report	243
Schuyler. Canada frontier	243
Franklin proposes a confederacy. Georgia. Ireland and America	244
The British court the aid of the savages	244
Apathy of congress. Lord North's proposal, and Jefferson in reply	245
Further organizing government in America	246
How to redeem the paper money	246
Congress refuses to open the American ports, and adjourns	246