The court then informed the jury that counsel for the defence, with the consent of the crown, had agreed to withdraw the plea of not guilty to the charge of murder, and would plead guilty to manslaughter.

After complimenting the jury on the way they had handled the case, his lordship said he was sure they would be satisfied with the sentence he would impose and that the ends of justice would be just as well met.

He then sentenced Arthur Sheridan to imprisonment for the rest of his natural life.

The prisoner, while hearing the verdict, retained the composure which has characterized him through the trial. His brother, who was standing near, change of plea.

BRUSSELS. Belgium, Oct. 12.—A steamer named Zeebrugge, after taking on a cargo of huge cases, which it is understood contained arms and ammunition, a wireless apparatus and provisions, suddenly left Antwerp to-night. The crew were engaged without being informed of their destination and it is icclieved that the steamer is the property of the Portuguese royalists. The port authorities are greatly annoyed at the departure of the vessel, the alleged owners, they say, having given false information regarding its cargo and destination.

Strong Pleas Made at Concluding Banquet for Adherence to Policy That Will Bind East and West and Protect Great Home Market, While Helping Agriculturists.

With their cares of state all relinuished, their important discussions all threshed out and their officers elected for the coming year, the members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association gathered at a splendid banquet last night in the King Edward and wound up their three days' convention in social good-fellowship. The speeches were in part serious, at least they appeared to be so intended by the orators themselves, but while the applause was generous, there was a good plause was generous, there was a good natured but decided antipathy evinced towards the long drawn-out addresses. Politics again figured largely in the speech-making, and references to tariffs, protection, imperial sentiment, progress, solidarity were ringing round the banquet hall in great abundance.

Reciprocity was occasionally mentioned also, and one speaker, waxing bold, brought back political remembrances with a one-time familiar expression called "the parting of the ways."
