cent. duty on luxuries, whereas mar necessities have a duty of 25 per cent Armed with blue book lore, Sir Richard Cartwright noticed that about $500,000 worth of silk had been imported under the 10 per cent. rate last year. Could that amount be honestly made into neckties?

J. P. Watson thought not.

President Fielding pointed out that if Mr. Watson were aware that 10 per cent. silks were being used in other goods than neckwear, and if he 'urnished the requisite information, the culpable parties would soon find them-selves in jail.

J. P. Watson urged that a very high

WHAT IT MEANS.

J. P. Watson urged that a very high rate of duty was not always in the rate of duty was in talways in the sinterests of the manufacturers. Sir Richard observed that, he preached that many years ago. But he had not succeeded in making many converts.

J. W. Woods contended that stiff competition would not cause the raising of the price of neckties, even if the duty thereon were increased. That led Sir Richard to say that whenever the duty was increased the con-
