His astuteness, versatility, unlimited wit, humor, pathos and bewitching elegance soon had placed him the leader of the bar and the leader of the Lirish people. His whole life had been spent in noble work and struggle to alleviate the distress of the masses. To-day Ireland owed more to O'Connell than perhaps any other leader for the great progress, in education, art and the prosperity of the dewntroden masses.

They Were Promptly "Canned."

As the result of a bit of sharp detective work performed by a man with a camera, and evidently in the employ of the Louisville & Nashville, 20 employes of that corporation were to-day discharged at Louisville, Ky.

Some time ago the Louisville & Nashville issued positive orders that no one in their employe should at any time visit saloons. It appears that the rule was not very closely observed, tho the road had no absolute proof of this.

Over a week ago a man with a camera drifted around to the various saloons. He snapped everybody for fun, as he explained it. To-day the railroad offichals called 20 men before them, and after they had denied having frequented saloons since the prohibitive order was issued, showed them their photographs taken in various saloons thrusout the town. The dismissals followed on the spot.

Added to this is the positive necessity for increased accommodation for secondary education, while proper provision for the development and conduct of a modern, properly equipped technical school must no longer be delayed."

"The board could not be too careful in the selection of teachers and in the maintenance of the highest standard possible in the staff, and the steps already taken to strengthen any weak places should be repeated from time to time, whenever conditions warranted action. It would be quite proper to find a wider place for the teaching of ethics.

Who helped the Union to resume business after a rather expensive tear, sat around ine gradually and primary team, and told the truth, and perhaps unconsciously lied to each other about the things they modestly admit they think they did over two-score years ago.

From some of the stories, red with realism, told by some of the grey and bald survivors, there is some suspicion that the early sixtles were busy days with some of them, and they had narrow escapes only because they were to grow up to be grand old men in a good young country. Some of them go so far as to say they loved Canada so much that they fought for the northern end of the little domestic trouble on the other side just to keep it from a wider place for the teaching of ethics.

"I should also be greatly pleased to see still more attention given to oral shoulder, armed with knives and forks, reading, mental arithmetic, composition and valiantly facing plates of presumand spelling and writing in our public school course up to the senior fourth 40 years ago, were men like John grade." "In this particular," he said, "we are ans, who helped to put Balaciava to fiving to do too much. Ninety per cent. of the pupils who complete the work of the senior fourth grade, and who do not enter a collegiate or the technical school for a three or four year, course cannot be held in our public schools beyond one year. We should omit, literature, history, civics and reading from the time-table for this one year. A year following the completion of the work of the senior fourth grade, well spent in giving particular attention to rapid figuring, business writing, book keeping and business practice, composition, spelling and shorthand, would qualify the average student for the work of a business office."

School Accommodation

Mr. Shaw went into details into the matter of overcrowded schools. He advocated that one good room at least in every building should be provided with safe and proper facilities for lighting, to be used frequently for lectures, debates, entertainments by pupils of an educational character, and public meetings of any sort relating to municipal or school business,

Among plans for providing immediates as well as future accommodation, for secondary education, must be the rection of a sultable building in the east end.
