SEIN FEIN MOVEMENT TO OPPOSE NATIONALISTS

Struggle in the Coming Irish By-Elections Will Be Most Exciting.

DUBLIN, July 22.—The Sein Fein Society evidently is preparing for a trial of strength against the Irish Nationalist party in the pending minor Irish general election. The resignation of Edward Blake, Irish Nationalist for the south division of Longford, makes the fourth vacancy, and if the Nationalists challenge Sir Thomas Henry Gratton, Esmond's contest in North Wexford five seats will be vacated.

Sir Thomas has declared himself flatly as a Sein Fein. At a big Sein Fein demonstration held by his constituency at Enniscorthy to-day a letter from him was read denouncing parliamentary agitation as worthless, "since England would never give home rule or any other concession for the asking."

"Ireland," the letter continued, "is not a colony; she is a sovereign nation and should give up begging with bated breath and whimpering humbleness in a foreign legislature for the restoration of her ancient liberties."

A meeting was arranged to be held in Phoenix Park, here Sunday, to support the Sein Fein policy. It was attended by only five hundred persons, altho the park was crowded with Sunday visitors.

NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE. United Press Association Made Up of Three Strong Parts.

The completion of an important press association consolidation is announced in New York. By arrangements just completed, the Publishers' Press Association, the Scripps-McRae Press Association and the Scripps News Association became one body under the name of the "United Press Association."

The United Press Association, incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, at Albany, secured by purchase, after some negotiation, all the franchises, assets and other assets and obligations of the three press associations, which together controlled practically all the existing press associations in the United States outside of the Associated Press.

The new United Press starts business with a complete program, but was hampered by the Scripps-McRae Press Association, which had a group of eastern newspapers formed by the Publishers' Press, latter the Scripps News Association was started to supply news to papers on the Pacific coast. All three made remarkable progress, but were hampered by being sectional rather than national organizations. While they formed working units, each other, they were always separately managed, and a step toward consolidation was made last summer, when the E. W. Scripps secured a controlling interest in the Publishers' Press.

The new association will be under similar control, every person actively interested with the press association business or with the publication of evening newspapers. It is announced that the United Press will not be run on narrow or monopolistic lines, but will seek to give fair and impartial service to all legitimate newspaper publishers in its field.

Thru its clients, system of leased wires, bureaus and correspondents, the United Press already has splendid news-gathering facilities, and these will be rapidly extended and improved.

Its Washington, European, New York, San Francisco, Chicago and other bureaus are unusually well manned and enterprisingly conducted. It is also some organization improved which has to its credit such historic "beats" as the assassination of President McKinley, the death of Queen Victoria, the massacre of King Alexander and Queen Draga at Belgrade, the signing of the peace between Russia and Japan at Portsmouth, etc. Recently a working man's strike was made with the aid of the United Press.

The new United Press has more business in the evening field alone than the old United Press had in both the morning and evening fields the year before it was disbanded. The form of organization which brought disaster to the old United Press has been entirely avoided in the new company.

Officers of the United Press are: President, John Vandercook; vice-presidents, Max Balthasar, Oliver Harsham, Andrew McLean; chairman of the board of directors, H. E. Clark. Mr. Clark was formerly president of the Scripps News Association.

The electric age. Just as the Twentieth Century was the Age of Steel, the Twentieth Century is its beginning at least, is the Age of Electricity, and electricity is doing more in ever increasing quantities. For the last six decades of the Nineteenth Century, says the Copper Handbook for 1906, just published by Horace J. Stevens of Houghton, Michigan, the production of the leading metals increased at the rate of almost exactly 1-2 per cent, compounded yearly, but in the last decade of the century, copper left the other metals behind, and for fifteen years past has averaged an increase of 10 per cent, compounded yearly. This difference of only one and one-half per cent in the ratio of yearly increase, may seem small, but like the fable of the horse's shoes, for which the first nail brought a penny, and each nail thereafter was doubled in price, the cumulative results are surprising, and the end of fifteen years have run into hundreds of millions of dollars.

In 1881, a quarter century past, the world's production of copper was 163,000 long tons, worth an average of 18 cents per pound, giving a total value of $65,000,000, in round figures, while at the present moment the copper mines of the world are producing at the rate of nearly 50,000 tons per annum, worth, with copper at a little more than twenty cents per pound, one million dollars for every day in the year, or at the rate of $365,000,000 long tons worth an average of the quarter of a century. With electricity finding new uses daily and with a rapid extension of electric energy for power, traction, and many other employments, there is small hope that the poor old world will be able to curtail its copper bill to any important extent, and every reason to believe that the world's copper, ten years hence, will cost considerably more than the world's iron and steel cost ten years ago.
