The contest covered the attendance at the home school or the school where the teacher of scholar made their home during the holidays. The contest will continue until such time as one of the two Sunday schools win for two years in succession. On Sunday afternoon L. W. Simms visted St. David's Church Sunday school and presented them with the trophy, bringing greetings and congratulations from his Sunday school. Robert Reid, superintendent of St. David's Sunday School, in accepting the cup, expressed the thanks of St. David's and extended greetings to Germain Street Baptist school.

Rev. Hugh Miller followed with a few happy remarks regarding the confew happy remarks regarding the contest. The cup was handsomely engraved with the wording, "Summer Sunday School Attendance Contest, Germain Street United Church vs. St. David's United Sunday School." On the cother side of the cup was enthe other side of the cup was en-graved, "Won by St. David's, 1926." Both Mr. Simms and Mr. Reid stated that the contest had added 50 per cent. to the different school attend-

Search for the craft said to be known as the Jupiter, follows the finding of a note on the beach. The note was enclosed in a whisky bottle. It was dated October 20, 1926 and read:

"Please save an American girl from rum runners. They are somewhere off Atlantic City. They want me to take care of them. They are always drunk. There are glasses and bottles over my room, so I am trying to get a lot of paper and send more notes as I have been doing. My name is Kate Lavina and I am from New York. Please help me. My father will pay you for it. The boat is called the Jupiter. Her next stop will be Cape May."

WEST SAINT JOHN is among those localities claiming latest honors in the flower competition, it appears, as on Friday, at 205 Charlotte street west, A. S. Grant plucked a very handsome and husky spike of snapdragons of deep red color. In writing to The Telegraph-Journal concerning this extremely late blooming flower, Mr. Grant said, "The enclosed snapdragon was picked this morning from a window box that has been continuously in the open without any protective covering or care. The whole box of it is as fresh and green as it was in mid-summer.

green as it was in mid-summer.
After the enclosed was picked we brought the box in the house for winter blooming."
Wild flowers were also among the bouquets presented to the pro-vincial editor yesterday. Harold Handel and James Power sent but-tercups, dandelions and a mustard blossom which they had picked at Brown's Flat on Nov. 18 while they were on their way to school.

Hammond River had an offering of little pink daisies. A nice buttonhole of these pretty garden flowers came from Miss Dorothy Kedey and were picked at Hammond Rives. and Miss Mamie Kirkpatrick. Paris Art Critics Art Critics
