Bucharest, Joy City Of Europe, Revels In Wine and Mirth

Rumanians Eat Five Times a Day and Adore Liquor, Cards and Pretty Women.

Bucharest, June 10.—Bucharest is growing faster than any other city in Europe. It is spreading out in all directions over the neighboring plains in an effort to house its population of a million, which is still growing. In 1918 the capital's population was only 328,000 which included 36,000 Austrians and Hungarians and 40,000 Jews. Bucharest is the joy city of Europe. Love and laughter, song and wine, dancing and card playing are as dear to the Rumanian heart as to the gayest spirits in Bohemia. The Rumanians eat five times a day and is ready for another repast at midnight. He dislikes going to bed. He loves his wine jug and his cards. And he would die without his rum-coffee and his gossip about the latest scandal of the town. The Calle Victoriei, Bucharest's Fifth Avenue, is studded with pretty women in the latest Parisian gowns and jewels. Smart looking army officers in high patent leather boots and blue and gold uniforms strut along the sidewalks, shedding smiles on the man's lovely femininity. Among these dashing Don Juans and Lotharios one sees motley groups of gypsy men and women with their numerous progeny, some of the children without a stitch of clothing. For this is the land of the gypsy fortune tellers and vagabonds of the United States claim descent. And the gypsy believes that beauty unadorned is adorned the most. Rumanian women, who admittedly are the most attractive and fascinating in the Balkans, owe their striking beauty to their strain of gypsy or Greek blood, their languorous eyes and their olive complexions. They are buoyant and pleasure loving. Both sexes in Rumania use perfumery, rouge and cosmetics in profusion. The cosmetic business is one of the most profitable in Rumania. The Rumanian men are tall, handsome and dark, but are inclined to be effeminate. They wear form-fitting jackets, waistbands and affect monocles and spats. This, of course, does not apply to the peasantry, who are a sturdy, homely energetic lot, and constitute the backbone of the country and its chief hope for the future. Although Bucharest prides itself on being the Paris of the Balkans, and French is spoken more than any other foreign tongue, there is a great desire on the part of the educated classes to learn English. American tutors are much in demand. There are at present three newspapers printed in French, which is the court and society language, but it probably will not be long before a daily paper, published in English will be established. Queen Marie, who is an accomplished writer, has published all her books in English, and that is the language of the royal family, although both the King and Queen command facile use of half a dozen other tongues.

Faces 170 Years Staten Island Bank

Robert Magruder Convicted of Aiding Theft of $610,000 From National Depository at Mariners Harbor.

New York, July 18.—Robert Magruder was found guilty by a jury in Federal Court, Brooklyn, before Judge William B. Sheppard, of participation in the looting of the Mariners Harbor, S. I. National Bank. His guilt was established by thirty-four counts, each of which the penalty may be $5,000 fine and five years in jail. Magruder, therefore, faces a maximum sentence of 170 years in jail and $170,000 in fines. He will be sentenced by Judge Sheppard next Thursday. Meanwhile he was remanded in $60,000 bail. Magruder was formerly president and general manager of the Johnson Shipyard Corporation. He was indicted on charges of aiding Sylvanus Bedell, cashier of the Mariners Harbor bank, to extract and misappropriate funds amounting to $610,000 from the bank during the years 1918, 1919 and 1920. Indicted with Magruder was his son, Donald B. Magruder, who is awaiting trial. The case for the government was presented by Assistant Federal Attorney Giaccone. The jury reached its verdict after a debate of three hours and twenty minutes. Magruder's demeanor during the final day of the hearing was reposed. During Judge Sheppard's charge his mind seemed to be far away from the matter in hand and he did not lose his self-possession when the jury returned to report its decision.

Frederick Laird had his hand crushed in an accident in McCavitt's foundry about 9.40 last evening. The injury was dressed at the General Public Hospital after which he went to his home.

"Invisible Princess" Imposes Dry Law On Bopal—and It Works

New York, July 18.—Bopal, that rugged little native state in central India, which has been ruled for three-quarters of a century by a line of "invisible" princesses, wielding the power of life and death over their subjects, has taken to prohibition—and likes it. At least the present ruler, Her Highness Nawab, Sultan Sir Jehan Begum, says she likes it. And, with her powers of life and death, what she likes is all right with her subjects, according to The Associated Press.

The spread of prohibition to Faraway, mystical India is described in a letter from Nawab Begum herself, indicated, at her royal direction, by her secretary in the political department (of undecipherable name), on an obviously venerable typewriter. The letter, bearing the Begum's royal crest, was made public by the committee on conservation and advance of the council boards of benevolence of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

"I am directed by her highness," the missive read, "to convey to your board her highness's many thanks for their kind appreciation of her policy in prohibiting liquor manufacture and sale in the state. It may interest you to know that the measure has already met with remarkable success. Great as the loss of income is from this source, her highness feels amply compensated for it by the morally improved moral and material conditions of her dear subjects."

The Nawab Begum, who ascended the throne in 1911, succeeding in a line of women rulers started in 1844, when Sikander Begum was crowned and struck a blow for Women's Rights by changing the royal succession to the female line, has been noted since her coronation for the justness of her rule and her solicitude for the welfare of her 665,000 subjects.

Like her predecessor, she has rigorously enforced the rule of Islam requiring all women to veil their faces in public, and hence is known as the "invisible princess." She created a sensation recently when she received the Prince of Wales in her palace of Arabian Nights splendor with her regal features obscured.

At a dinner to the prince, then on tour in India, she announced a series of governmental reforms, including establishment of an executive council of state and a legislative council, all embodied in a new constitution. The Nawab Begum first sprang into public note in 1911, shortly after her coronation, when she visited London to attend the coronation of King George—and succeeded in losing her dashing young son, who subsequently was found disporting himself at Montmartre with a young dancer whose face was not veiled.

More recently she figured as donor of $88,000 for support of a school at Delhi for her veiled sisters. And again, two years ago, she broke into print by purchasing 2,000 watches, which she distributed among her subjects.

HAD GREAT TIME AT BOYS' CAMP

With the closing of the Y. M. C. A. boys' camp came the end of a wonderful two weeks spent by nearly forty boys under canvas at Chipman. At the annual election of campers to the "Hall of Fame," the following boys were elected: Best looking boy, Harold Heaney; best natured boy, Stewart Allan; biggest eater, George Robinson; laziest boy, Maurice Fowler; best athlete, H. Heaney; best camper, S. Allan; camp humorist, Douglas Rodd; Heavenly twins, L. Fillmore, M. Lowe; fattest boy, W. Osgood; most popular boy, Stewart Allan; hardest worker, George Hare; most popular game, baseball; most popular eats, strawberry shortcake.

The competition for camp honors between the various tribes was very keen, the "Mimams" winning, with the "Troquois" in second place, the "Mohawks" third, and the "Chippewas" fourth. The little chiefs of the various tribes were as follows: "Mimams," Stewart Allan; "Troquois," Harold Heaney; "Mohawks," Douglas Rodd; "Chippewas," A. Macinnis.

Some plants are known to indicate the presence of certain minerals. A sheep farming company in South America made $14,000,000 in four years.
