the ruling powers by the freedom or ms criticisms.

The editor was arrested and confined in a narrow passage between the cages of two jaguars, notorious for their bad tempers and their intense dislike for human society.

The intervening space was so regulated that neither of the ferocious animals could get its paws quite to the middle line between the cages, so that a spare, active person, if very careful to follow the classical advice about the advantages of steering a middle course, might managé to pass without special injury, though the achievement would be both exciting and dangerous. exciting and dangerous.

Our editorial friend happened to be stout, and therefore was the more easily reached by the occupants of the cages. As if to add insult to injury, he was given a chair on which to sit and at the same time was furnished with a copy of his own paper, the issue which had brought him into trouble, in order that he might meditate upon its con-tents.

He tried to sit motionless and bolt He tried to sit motionless and bolt upright, feeling those sleepy, cruel eyes fixed upon hem. At the slightest movement or the rustle of the paper uneasy mutterings arose from the cages, and a plaw would stretch stealthily toward him. Leaning quickly to the other side, he was sure to be met by the ugly claws of the second jaguar. It was a case of Scylla and Charybdis.

Every few minutes the jaguars became wildly excited and clawed fiercely at the shrinking editor, who, do his best, could not escape those rending too nails. His clothing was torn to shreds, but except for a few scratches he was not really injured.

GOD'S COMFORTING

The world grows lonely, and, with many a tear,
I stretch out longing hands in vain,

beside Whose love, in all its fullness, is thine own;
That love is changeless, and, whate'er
betide
He will not leave thee—thou are not along!

So Faith and Hope shall cheer me all the way, And Love, their sweetest sister, southe my pain.

My life in loyal service, let me bring
To other lives the joy God giveth me.

NERVOUS... DEPRESSION

Nerves - Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve

People who suffer from Nervous Depression and Exhaustion frequently look healthy and the thousand dis-strong. They alone know the thousand our tressing symptoms which make their lives miscrable.

The lack of nerve force results in a slow and sluggish action of the heart, impaired digestion, headache, despondency, and a fear to venture, loss of energy, sleepiesaness, incapacity for mental labor or business.

With these symptoms there is usually melancholy and fear of death, which tends to increase nervousness, bit there is every reason to be hopeful if the right treatment is used.
Dr. Chaes's Nerve Food contains all the nutrition required to create new brain and nerve tissue. It imparts to the nervous system that life-giving principle which sends a thrill of new strength and vigor through the system.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food will cure by the building-up process, which enables the body to laugh at disease and weakness. Face expended, they pay better than any other stock I can handle. Radical as this statement may seem to some, it is true. All of my old neighbors who have made sheep a specialty all their lives without one failure have good farms, nice homes and a good bank account.

Sheep are an enemy to weeds and burs. Where they have a chance to run, they will completely destroy all noxious weeds and triers, making the farm look clean and tidy, provided the owner will keep his fences in good repair. They bring up the fertility of the farm, are great equalizers of the soil by grazing in the valleys through the day and sleeping on the knolls at night. By their constant grazing—if the field is not overstocked in very dry weather—there will grow a very thick sod that will produce an abundance of feed. They produce the most healthful, sweetest and most delicious meat for the family of any other stock. The odor from a nicely cooked mutton chop will tempt a sick man to eat.

They are unlike all other stock, if de-

They are unlike all other stock, if decently managed. A good sheep can never die in debt to a man. If it dies when yeaned, it has consumed nothing. If it dies the first winter, the wool will pay for its keep up to that period. If it lives to be sheared once, it brings its owner in debt to it, and if the ordinary course of wool producing and breeding goes on, that indebtedness increases with great rapidity as long as the sheep lives. If the horse or steer dies at 3 or 4 years old, or the cow before breeding, the loss is almost a total one.

One man can take care of and feed and handle more sheep than he can of any other stock, which reduces the expense. The farm is so much nicer from not being rooted or tramped as by other stock. With a little care and trouble wican educate our sheep to do anything we want. For instance, at yeaning time we have them so tame that in going around among them in the shed they will just lie still and we can step over them, and when driving along the road a few short, sharp whistles with the mouth will bring the flocks to a standstill.

I do not write this for the purpose of converting any man, but to show that a sheep man is on an equal footing with any other stock breeder. You will always find a good sheep man happy and contented, says A. S. Forsman in the They are unlike all other stock, if de-

White or Cream Colored Sections?

"Is it better to use white or cream colored sections or does it make any difference which you use?" This question, discussed by the United States Beekeepers union, brought out the following among a large number of replies, most of them favorable to white sections:

Mr. Masters—I believe that in my

Mr. Masters—I believe that in my market I can sell comb honey in white sections for 1' cent more per section than in cream colored sections. I have tried it time and again. In the cream colored sections it doesn't sell well.

Mr. Lathrop—I have tried both, and I find that the material in the cream colored sections is very much poorer than that in the white sections. There is more breakage in the cream colored. I do not use them either for myself or for my customers. I buy nothing but the snow white, and I feel better satisfied.

Mr. Scott-I have sold more or less fied.

Mr. Scott—I have sold more er less. honey with both white and cream colored sections to the merchants in Chicago. Omaha and Kansas City, and I do not know that there is any difference.

Mr. Danzenbake—I have recommended in my book the best sections, No. 1. I think if the honey I was getting was dark I would use dark sections, but if I produced white honey I believe I would like white sections.

Mr. Rauchfoss—The past season we sold about 100,000 No. 2 sections, and pretty nearly every one of the beekeepers who bought them because they were forced to buy them would come back and say they wouldn't take any more at any price. We have concluded that next year we will not sell them. The dark sections don't show off the honey so well.

Ohio's Acreage of Wheat. The Ohio crop bulletin of Nov. a says: The acreage of wheat seeded for the harvest of 1899 is the largest for a number of years, larger by about 400,000 acres than the area of last year. Generally speaking for the state, the plant is in good condition, with the fields well and evenly covered. There is considerable complaint of fly and grub working on some of the early sown, and damage will likely accrue from this cause.

News and Notes Tesin's latest discovery is announced to be the possibility of transmitting great amounts of power through the natural media—the earth and the air—without the use of any wire, to distances of thousands of miles. This will interest agriculturists.

"Artificial cats," a combination of certain factory byproducts with bran, controll, rye, etc., are said to have appeared upon the German market.

It is claimed by people who have investigated the subject that electric cars and bicycles are not causing-a diminution in the number of horses used. And Dr. Liantard, the eminent New York veterinarian, is quoted by an exchange to the effect that the use of automobiles in Paris is by no means so extensive as he had been led by the papers of this country to suppose.

STABLE-KEEPER

This One was Born for the Job and was a Gentleman

New York & an Wasn't Afraid to Trus Mis Valuable Horses to him—No Man Allowed to Use Profane Language Near the Horses.

Not long since I was spending a night-with a friend in New York, and was invited to an early ride in Central Park. The offer was gladly accepted, as I knew he had a number of valuable blood-horses, which were kept at, a public stable. When I expressed surprise at his willingness to of anyone but his own trained groom, he said: "The man who keeps this stable is a born stable-keeper and a gentleman. His men are carefully a ceted, and the following are his rules: First, no man will be employed who drinks intoxicating liquors. His men, like his herses, must drink water, cold water only. Second, no man must speak loudly to any of the horses, or in the stable where they are. Horses of good blood are nervous, and loud, excited conversation is felt by every ther berse who hears them, and keep them all nervous and uneasy. Third, no man must use profane language in the hearing of the horses."

I was not surprised after that that my friend was willing to leave this horses in such hands.

A man who lately came over from Canada told the writer that on board the steamer one of the passengers went up to shother in the smoking-room and asked him to have a drink with him. The man thus invited continued reading a newspaper and made no reply. The other man again asked him to drink with him. No answer again. A third invitation was then given in these words: "Sir. I have asked you in as friendly a way as possible to drink with me, and each time you went on with your reading, and had not the civility to answer me. Now I ask you fessible third time if you will drink wine, whisky or anything else with me?" The man then put aside his paper and answered very quietly: "Do you see that glass sir. Well, if I were to take even a quarter of it I could not leave off until I had drunk all the liquor on board. This is why I would not drink with you." All present admired the man's self-control, and bearned a striking lesson on the danger of jutting temptation is a brother's way.—From The Quiver.
