Dr. Spodgras, who attacked Pos, during his last sickness, communicated some years since to a temperance journal as affecting account of the close of his life:

"On a chilly sad wel November evening I received a note stating that a man answering to the name of Edgar Alian Pos, who claimed to know me, was at a drinking sallon problems in the local journals it close in Lombard street, in Baltimore, in state of deep intoxication and great dastification. I repaired immediately to the ago. It was an election day. When I entered the bar-room of the house, I instantly necognized the face of one whom I had often seen and knew well, although it wore an aspect of vacant stupidity that made me shudder. The intellectual flash of his eye had vanished, or rather had been quenched in the bowl, but the broad espacious forchead of the author of The Raven, was still there, with width in the region of ideality such as few men over possessed. He was so uttarly stupided with liquor that I thought it best not to seek recognition or conversation, especially as he was autrounded by a crowd agantlemen actuated by idle curiosity rather than sympathy. I immediately ordered a room for him where he could be made comfortable until I got word to his relatives—for there were large. A railrand collision occurred on the Northverlain in Baltimore, Just at that moment.

Resom a statement, in the Local grain, and including a lind grain and including alling reselved; it would appear that about 25,000,000 dubles of grain, and including alling reselved at the local galling reselved at the local galling reselved at the local including alling reselved at the local galling reselved at the seast 50,000 dubles of grain, and the local galling reselved at the seas got word to his relatives—for there were several in Baltimore. Just at that moment one or two of the persons referred to, getting information, arrived on the spot. They declined to take private care of him, for the reason that he had been very abusive and ungrateful on all occasions when drunk, and advised that he be sent to an hospital. He was accordingly placed in a south and to be the sent to an hospital. advised that he be sent to an hospital. He was accordingly placed in a coach and conveyed to the Washington College Hospital, and put under the care of a competent and attentive resident physician of that institution. So insensible was he, that we had to carry him to a carriage as if he were a corpse. The muscles of articulation seemed paralysed to speechlessness, and mere incoherent mutterings were all that were heard.

He died in the hospital after three or four days, during which time he enjoyed only occasional and fitful seasons of consciousness. His disease, as will have been anticipated, was mania a potu; a disease whose finale is always fearful in maniacal manifestations. In one of his more lucid moments, when asked by the physician whether he would like to see his friends, he exclaimed; friends! My best friend would be he who would take a pistol and blow my brains out and thus re-lieve me of my agony. These were among his last words.

LARD RENDERING .- This is an important operation of the farm, and one that requires cleanliness and care. If white butter shows bad management of the dairy, yellow, bad colored lard, unmistakably speaks of bad colored lard, unmistakably speaks of ignorance and neglect. Where a number of hogs are kept, the quantity of lard proves an interesting item in the good housewife accounts. For cooking and confectionary purposes, for ointments and candles, they are all deserving of important notice and particular attention. The Medical Colleges of London in own negligible way of preparing of London and Dublin have each recom-mended their own peculiar way of preparing it, and as it forms no important ingredients in the making of the various ointments, we invite attention to the two methods. The College of Surgeons, in London, directs it to be cut in pieces, and melted in a moder-ate heat, and strained through flannel while hot, with pressure or expression. The Dub-lin College orders it to be done by straining it through linen. The editor of the "Cyclo-redie of Deposition Medicine" the emission pedia of Domestic Medicine," the eminent pedia of Domestie Medicine," the eminent scleet physician, Dr. Thomas Andrew, says: "There is a much better plan than either for families to pursue, who feed and kill hogs for their own use. The side or best lard, would be freed from the skins, cut into small pieces, and put into a large stone basin over a pot of boiling water, and the water kept boiling until the lard is mediad. During the process it may be frequently pressed. kept holling until the lard is metted. During the process, it may be frequently pressed with a wooden spoon or the end of a roller, and carefully poured off while hot. The melted lard thus produced will be richer, have a finer flavor, and keep longer without salt than lard melted in an iron pot in immediate contact with the fires. It should, therefore, be kept for making ointments, which applied to tender surfaces, such as blisters, burns, and scalds, and for the finer processes of cooking. The remainder of the remelted lard may be done in a clean metal pot over a slow fire, and a certain portion of salt added while it is hot. This will be very good, not equal to the former, as the other, if kept cool, will be good for some weeks without salt." The following is a valuable receipt for making lard candles: Take six pounds of lard, and one ounce of nitric acid; put the lard into a clean iron kettle, and when fairly melted, add the acid. Let it simmer, stir it skim is, and then it is ready for use. If good nitric acid is used, the

The steamer which left on Saturday the 7th, had on board the first shipment of copper ore sent to England from a new mine in the Eastern Townships, known as M'Caws, which is said to rival in richness the Acton mine itself. The fact is that Lower Cana-THE Subscriber offers for sale on lot No.

The longitudes of Quebee and Montreal, is full of copper ore, the richest in the world with the exception perhaps of that on the shores of Lake Superior, which is further from a market and less easily got out of the rock. The Harvey mines are now yielding enormously. The mines at St. Flavien, Upton, and Lotbiniere are beginning to be develeped. We are at the commencement of a great copper era, pregnant with grand results for Canada. For, mark you, the low price of copper which will destroy all the poor mines of Europe, and is even now injuring mining property in England, will do very little damage here; for though it may make it a losing speculation to get out copper ore containing only five or six per cent of metal, it cannot have that effect where, as here, the ore contains from 20 to 50 per cent, and even more.—Canadian News correspon.
