"Thoughts on the Poetry and Literature of the Bible."

PRICE NINE PENCE.

"These lectures are highly honourable to their author. Full of literary enthusiasm, they exhibit a happy appreciation of the chief characteristics of sacred poetry; and in the glow of sympathetic eloquence the lectures have themselves become poetical. They are calculated to send the reader to some portions of scripture with fresh eyes, because with new expectations."—English Presbyterian Messenger.

"A very superior production. The writer is thoroughly in love with his subject; his style finely harmonizes with it; and ever the whole discussion he throws a rich glow of religious fervour, which is very refreshing and instructive. One naturally is led to put this little treatise alongside of a similar thing which lately came from the pen of Dr. Har- milton of London; and it is saying a good deal of Mr. Harvey's tract when we give it as our opinion that it can stand such a comparison. As regards mere style we greatly prefer it. We commend this little treatise most heartily, hoping that it is only the first- fruits of much that is yet to come to us from the colonies."—Scottish Guardian.

"He must, indeed, be possessed of little emotion who can rise from the perusal of the pamphlet before us without a deeper reverence for the Bible, and a longing desire to be- come more conversant than ever with the precious truths it unfolds to our view."—Halif- ax Witness.

"The Committee can without hesitation appeal to it as a most creditable specimen of the literary ability and scholarship of the ministers by whom our important colonial sta- tions are now in course of being supplied."—Report of the Colonial Committee presented to the General Assembly of the Free Church, May 1854.

"To treat such a subject as it deserved required no ordinary share of ability. Mr. Harvey has executed his task in a manner that reflects the highest credit on him, as a critic and a scholar. Without extensive erudition and a fine taste he could not have pro- duced this pamphlet. But he brings to the elucidation of his subject what is quite as re- cessary as scholarship—a right appreciation of the moral grandeur, the spiritual beauties of the Bible. It is the splendour of the theme that gives dignity to its literature and life, and beauty to its poetry. The author realizes this and makes his readers feel it too."—Irish Presbyterian.

"Testimony of Nineveh to the Veracity of the Bible."

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND THREE PENCE.

"An excellent addition to our 'Christian Evidences'—popular in manner, graphic and well put in form. From the religious system, military usages, costumes, architecture, &c., of the Assyrians, Mr. Harvey deduces several telling arguments for the veracity of Scripture."—Edinburgh Witness.

"In perfect sobriety we say that it has but seldom been our lot to read a pamphlet of so fascinating and instructive a character. We have in it the whole marrow of Layard's three volumes, and especially those parts that have a more direct and immediate bearing on revelation; and all this, not in the form of a skeleton detail of facts, but garnished and embellished with the products of a fine glowing imagination, and of a chaste, elegant style. We have often thought as we looked into Layard's expensive work and its circum- stantial account of every slab and hieroglyphic among these resurrectionized ruins, that it would prove an immense boon to the plain reader of the Bible could he have, within a small compass those parts that appertain more directly to the confirmation of the sacred volume, or to the elucidation of some of its more intricate passages. This has been ac- complished by Mr. Harvey in a way alike creditable to his talents and high literary at- tainments."—Halifax Witness.

"The subject is admirably handled. The great work of Layard, too ponderous for the generality of readers, has here its spirit extracted and condensed in a highly popular and attractive form. We are happy to see the author of these eloquent lectures devoting his great talents and extensive acquirements to the cause of Biblical truth. We heartily re- commend our readers to purchase and peruse these lectures."—Colonial Presbyterian.

"In arranging his facts, and analyzing the wonderful discoveries of the ancient capital, Mr. Harvey exhibits a familiar acquaintance with ancient history, a powerful and fervid imagination, and a discriminating judgment. The results of the whole investigation are brought to bear with all the force of irresistible logic on the verities of the Bible."—Irish Presbyterian.
