

The drive to Lachine (nine miles) is one of great interest. Lachine is noted as being the scene of a terrible massacre of the whites by the Iroquois Indians in 1789, when over 200 persons were burned alive. Caughnawaga, an Indian village, is situated immediately opposite, and is connected by a steam ferry. The Lachine road leads along the bank of the St. Lawrence, and commands views of scenery of unsurpassed beauty and grandeur. Another favorite drive is in an opposite direction to the east, to Longue Pointe, passing through the Village of Hochelaga. The river scenery in this direction is very fine. The Mount Royal Cemetery is situated on the east side of the mountain, about two miles from the city. The approach to it is by a winding carriage-way. From the main entrance avenues diverge towards the different parts of the cemetery; that on the right leading to the winter vaults. Trees grow in all their natural wildness, and their deep shadows spread a refreshing coolness around, and invite one to rest on the garden seats placed in different parts. From the highest summit in the cemetery the eye ranges over a most enchanting picture of rural scenery; in the distance rises a part of Mount Royal, clothed with its primeval forest, while immediately below lies the most finished and beautiful portion of the cemetery, with its costly granite monuments, or more humble marble or stone tablets.

One of the most delightful, as well as most exciting, experiences of the visitor to Montreal is the descent of the Lachine Rapids. A train leaves Bonaventure station every morning at 7 o'clock for Lachine (nine miles), where a steamer is in readiness, on which passengers may embark, and return to the city, shooting the rapids, and passing under Victoria Bridge on the way. The time consumed is but little more than two hours, but the sensations of those two hours are such as will not be forgotten during a lifetime.

Jacques Cartier Square has a fine outlook upon the river, is ornamented by two Russian guns from Sebastopol, presented to the city by the Imperial Government. A column, surmounted by a statue of Lord Nelson, is placed at the head of the square, erected in 1808, by the merchants of Montreal, shortly after the death of the Admiral.

Viger Square, or Garden, situated on Craig and St. Denis streets, is the finest square in Montreal as to site. It contains three fountains, the largest one in the centre of the square. Close by this fountain is a neat
