

The Devil's Footsteps.—A singular phenomenon has for some time existed in the parish of Rowley Regis, which has not only given rise to the most absurd rumors, but has been a source of wonder, and still remains an inexplicable puzzle to all the cunning men and philosophers of the locality. More than five years ago, in a small meadow occupied by Messrs. Mills and Co., at the Eagle Colliery, and through which is a footpath to the house of Mr. John G. Higgs, the check bailiff at the wharf, one morning were discovered a number of marks across the greenward, from the path to the boundary fence, and back again in a triangular form. These marks were nearly in the form of an immense mis-shapen human foot, and not only was every trace of vegetation destroyed, but the very turf appeared as if scorched with a red hot iron. Numbers of people were attracted to the spot daily, and as the report spread, it was visited by thousands, and damage to a considerable amount was done, particularly on Sundays. The affair went on, and after the lapse of a year or two, a strong thorn fence was placed round, in the expectation that of course grass would again grow over the spots, where the common belief now is that his Infernal Majesty, for some purpose unknown to mortals, had imprinted the marks of his feet, but all in vain—not a single blade of any description of vegetation has ever yet appeared on the enchanted spots, and though the fence has been since removed, and the field regularly mown, the baneful influence still remains, and there the deep indented marks are, hard, dry, and barren—as at first, a memorial of some mysterious agency; but what it was no human ingenuity has yet discovered. It has been rumored that a gentleman residing near has affirmed he would gladly give half his fortune to have this disagreeable mystery satisfactorily explained.

Funeral Ideas.—A merchant in a considerable town in Scotland was lately visited by a newly made widow of a workman, residing in an adjoining village, who informed him of the loss of the godman, and asked his advice and assistance regarding the funeral. She was determined, she said, to give him a decent burial, though she spent every farthing she had in the attempt. He kindly took the charge of the business, and engaged, at a moderate rate, a plain hearse and a couple of mourning coaches, roomy enough to carry a dozen relatives and friends to the churchyard. In a day or two she returned, and was profuse in her thanks at the satisfactory conclusion of the business. "It was a most respectable funeral," she said; "a' her neighbors wondered how Sally Tamson could afford to bury her man in siccan style." This was the cumulative point of satisfaction; but in the cup of human happiness there is always one bitter drop; and here it was according to her own native admission; "there was just one thing which vexed her, that John, poor man, had not been able to witness the style in which his own funeral had been conducted; for she was sure he had been proud to see it." This curious confusion of ideas brings to our recollection a story told of an old lady in Liddesdale, who in her will had given particular directions as to her interment, which was to take place in a churchyard far away among the hills, and remote from her then residence. When laid on her deathbed and waiting for her expected dissolution, a heavy snowstorm came on, and appeared likely to continue. Ruminating on this, she dictated a codicil, revoking her previous orders as to interment, and directed it to take place at a cemetery not far distant from her house; her reasons for the change being that the funeral party, with so long a distance to travel in such stormy weather, would be sure to catch cold; there would be a great deal of grumbling in consequence, and she would never hear the end o' t.—Dumfriess Courier.

The Yankee Outwitted.—A Yankee and a Frenchman owned a pig in co-partnership. When killing time arrived they wished to divide the meat. The Yankee was very anxious to divide it so that he would get both hind quarters, and persuaded the Frenchman that the proper way to divide was to cut it across the back.—The Frenchman agreed to it on condition that the Yankee would turn his back and take choice of the pieces after it was cut in two. The Yankee turned his back and the Frenchman asked—"Vich piece will you have—ze piece wid ze tail to him, or ze piece vat ain't got no tail?" "The piece with the tail," replied the Yankee. "Den by gar, you can take him, and I take ze oder one," said the old Frenchman. Upon turning round the Yankee found that the Frenchman had cut off all the tail and stuck it in the pig's mouth.

The London Porter Breweries.—Twice the quantity of porter already brewed in London in a year would be something like equivalent to the estuary of the Mersey opposite the Pier head at spring tide.—When one of Meux's vats burst, it swept away a whole street—houses, inhabitants, and all—like an overflow of the Scheldt; and that was in 1814, when vats were mere pipkins to what they are now. At Whitbread's, which ranks but third in the trade, there is one of such prodigious dimensions, that its twenty-five hoops weigh from one to three tons each, and its contents are 20,000 barrels, being some twenty times the capacity of the Tun at Heidelberg. Barclay's brewery is all ready half the size of Paxton's Plate-glass Palace, and covers upwards of ten acres; so, if the produce of porter be regulated by superficial extent of premises, and that there is to be double produce next year, the building ought to be fully equal to the Aladdin-like structure in Hyde-park. The firm brew about half-a-million of barrels a year at present, being at the rate of some ten gallons per head, per month, for every man, woman and child in London, saying nothing of what the six other great houses turn out.
