Classical Music And Its Tunefulness

Because a lot of tommy-rot has been talked and written about music, a great many people are afraid of it. That is, they are afraid of what is usually called "Classical Music" (a horrid term, that should be done away with). They have been told that it is uninteresting stuff, dry, stupid, all noise and no tune. So they fight shy of the "classical."

The term "classical music" is like a red shawl to a mad bull with some folk. This is simply because they don't know, or don't stop to think what it means. Of course it simply means that certain music has stood the test of time and has thus achieved universal recognition as great. But instead of saying "classical music" I prefer to say simply "good music" to differentiate between it and the so-called "popular" airs that go the rounds and die in a season.

Now there is nothing very difficult about listening to good music. If one will only give it a chance it will tell its own story, and a beautiful and wonderful story it has to tell in most instances. One does not need a deep and expensive musical education to appreciate its loveliness and as for its being all noise and no tune, some of the simplest and most exquisite melodies we have, come from the pen of the great masters. These are known and loved by the simplest of folk as well as by advanced music students the world over.

I once heard a man express the utmost boredom with the grand opera "Lucia di Lammermoor," while, at the same time, he thought a certain popular song, whose melody was taken from that same opera, "one of the best ever." Just a few weeks ago a performer in a Toronto vaudeville theatre treated his audience to a song, the air of which was a shocking theft from Chopin's "Fantasia Impromptu." The name of the song—there is no need for secrecy—was: "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows."

Nearly always, when a popular song writer wants a tune, he gets out his well thumbed volume of Rossini, or Chopin, or Mendelssohn (who doesn't remember what the song writers did with the "Spring Song?"), or Verdi or one of the other great masters, and without much effort he finds a melody that every street urchin will be whistling, quite unaware that he is really whistling "classical music." Of course the master's music is usually distorted, twisted and mangled until the original becomes only vaguely recognizable and it is never half so lovely as it was in the original.

Some of these days I am going to print some of these melodies, so that those who have been fighting shy of "classical" music, may get a taste of its beauties and learn to love it and long for more—Exchange.

Here's To The Weekly

When you hear someone speak of the "Country Weekly" you never think of newspapers printed in the country. Your impression is rather of a neat little publication issued from a small shop in a small town which is probably the centre of a fairly large and prosperous community. Isn't that true?

Then why do we not call the newspaper a "Community Weekly"? That would be a broader title and one far more characteristic of its service. It does not limit its news to items from the country. Its service covers city, town or village and surrounding community. It is a public utility on a small scale. Give the weekly its just dues, for it is always a power in the community. The large daily may carry more foreign news and more scandals of the day, but the truly wholesome news of the community will be found in the "Community Weekly."

Along with its wholesomeness

Here It Is---The Old Favorite

No Treatment for Coughs and Colds Was Ever So Satisfactory

All these years Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has held its place in the family medicine chest because there has been nothing to equal it.

It holds the confidence of all as the most certain relief from Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough and Asthma.

Saved from Pneumonia      Stubborn Cough

Mr. W. O. Kidder, R.R. No. 1, Noyan, Ont., writes:—"I think Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is just wonderful for coughs and colds. Two bottles entirely freed my cough after I had tried every other cough medicine I knew of. I feel sure it saved me from having pneumonia, and I cannot recommend it too highly."

Mrs. Jeremiah M. Bigelow, Bigelow, Ont., writes:—"I had a very stubborn cough for over four years, and I tried doctors and almost everything without results. One day an old friend asked me to try Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. I used five bottles, and it worked like magic. I have never been bothered since, and that is some years ago."

goes ACCURACY—more than any daily paper can possibly possess. The community editor takes the time to collect his news personally or his friends, upon whom he can depend, hand it to him, thereby safeguarding its reliability. Where will you find the big city editor who can afford to check each item, large and small, for accuracy in details? And that is the stronghold of the weekly, thoroughness of its service to the community, the publication representing your district and town deserves the broader title of the "Community Weekly" --- and it also deserves every bit of the support you and your neighbors can give it.

Here's A Healthy Sign

It is interesting to note that more and more big city concerns are distributing their printing concerns to job offices in the smaller towns, and that many of magazines owning plants of their own are moving out of the great centres of population. It breaks down the old belief that the bigger the town the better the printing. Business men have come to know that good printing is a matter of brains and machinery, and that these can function in the small town as well--- quite often better---than in the stuffy, soot-laden city. The matter of raw materials, such as paper and ink is not a problem. The smaller towns buy from the same mills and the same dealers as the city printing offices, and at the same price. Then, too, greater care is taken with the job in the smaller offices, because the workman is anxious to prove beyond question that he can turn out as neat, attractive and business getting printing as comes from the mammoth city institutions. The fact that expenses are not as high and that the work can generally be done cheaper by the smaller printing offices is also tending to bring more and more job work out of the cities and into the small town plants.

The December term of the Supreme Court which was scheduled to open on Tuesday, Dec. 5th has been postponed one week.

Judge Chandler who is presiding at this session, has just sailed for England. He was married recently and spent his honey-moon there.
