WEST HURON

How the Campaign Progresses All Along the Line.

Enthusiastic Reception of M. C. Cameron dresses by the Reform Candidate and

There was a large turnout of electors at the township hall, Colborne, on Friday evening, and a goodly number of ladies graced the occasion with their the Benmiller meeting Saturday even-presence. Ex-reeve Young was called ing. The hall was packed to suffocation, touched upon. The next speaker was and at first view it almost looked as if Brown (?) from Toronto, or Glammis, or the Tories had made preparation to pack determine. The young stranger opened his remarks by stating that M. C. ston, "Deacon" Mitchell, Allan Embury, ed his remarks by stating that M. C. Cameron was living in a house that wasn't paid for. Mr Cameron corrected him, and Brown (!) immediately replied, "Oh, you paid the price that was asked for it when it was knocked down to you at a bargain, but the man who built the house didn't pay for it, and the house is not paid for to this day." (A voice—"What has that to do with Mr Cameron?") Brown (!) replied, "Oh nothing, only Mr Cameron's house is not paid for." Cries of "Talk politics." "Den't be a fool," and "Don't lie," were heard in various parts of the hall, and the strange young and "Don't lie," were heard in various parts of the hall, and the strange young am got annoyed and said, "I don't expect fair play here to night, for Cameron has packed the meeting." The venerable chairman remonstrated with the speaker for making such absurd statements, and read a said him to confine himself to political issues. The latter turned upon the chairman and said that gentleman was derelict in his duty, and was endeavoring to "bulldose" him. The crowd now began to jeer the callew young fellow, and D. McGillicuddy had to rise and ask that the speaker be allowed to proceed with his remarks. After a hearinz was again obtained, Brown (7) and stated that the was "an abject creature," and the was "an abject creature," and that "when he stated that the Mail was not a thoroughly independent paper he liad." In a flash McGilliuddy a possible the conservative interest, in the Conservative interest, in the Conservative interest, in the Conservative interest, and D. In a flash McGilliuddy and served to man and so was a state and the latter was "an abject creature," and the conservative and the conservative and the dend own to business. At the end of the hour allotted him, he had born down to business. At the end of the hour allotted him, he had bend cown to be and bond of the hour allotted him, he had bend cown to be and power to the day, and a tive minutes after the expiration of his time, the chairman and suid that Brown (7) and time was leaved to wind up." said Brown (8) in the Cameron to produce my authority—to wait the day, and at five minutes after the expiration of his time, bend of the hour allotted him, he had barely touched upon any of the issues of the day, and at five minutes after the expiration of his time, bend of the hour allotted him, he had barely touched upon any of the issues of the day, and at five minutes after th that he was "an abject creature," and that "when he stated that the Mail was not a thoroughly independent paper he iied." In a flash McGillicuddy was on the floor, and had the ruffianly language corrected. He said, "Ladies and gentlemen, you know me for many years, and you know whether I am the sort of man that this stranger speakes of me as being. I have lived in this section for mearly seven long years, and there is no man, be he Girt to Tory, who will not take my statement on any question as being my honest conviction. I am mobilled to address you here tonight, but I cannot let the opportunity pass after what has been said by this Nobody from God-knows-where, without letting you know that I personally resent and am prepared to combat the imputations cast upor me by this Political Tramp."
