News of an Old Resident.

Rev. Dr. Barraza, a well-known Methodist divine, in a letter to the Christian Guardian chronicles a visit which he paid to a former well-known resident of this city. The reverend doctor says his visit will ever be a memorable one, and continues: "During my late visit to Ottawa I spent a pleasant hour with Rev. J. H. Robinson, who is spending the evening of life at the house of Professor Sanders, his esteemed son-in-law. Mr. Robinson is blind, hence his beloved daughter and other members of his family read to him. Having known Mr. Robinson about 40 years, we talked much of the old times and our fallen comrades who have reached their final home. He is greatly interested in all the affairs of the Methodist Church, and I should insert his name for $25 on the list of subscribers to the building and endowment of Victoria University. We prayed together, and expressed a hope to meet again, if not on earth in heaven. Mr. Robinson is 84 years of age, and until about a year ago attended Dominion Church regularly, and occasionally occupied the pulpit, greatly to the pleasure and profit of the vast assembly which worships in that splendid edifice."

The defendant Gibson is chairman of the building committee of a church in Petrolia, and the plaintiff's claim as assignee of two orders given by the contractor on moneys to be paid him by the defendants in respect of his contract.

The chief difficulty in question was to be satisfied out of the certificate of moneys due on June 1. The defense alleges that the order did not operate as an assignment; that no proper notice of it was given; that no money was due on June 1; that in respect of moneys accruing due after that date the order, being payable out of a special fund, cannot operate as an assignment; and that, at all events, certain mechanics' liens filed before the garnishment, being due for repairs, take priority. Macbeth (London), for the plaintiff, contra. Reversed.

Re Trevelick vs. Henshaw.—D. Armour, for the garnishee, moved for an order of prohibition to the ninth Division Court of the county of Middlesex, Rowell, for judgment creditors, contra. The garnishee, on motion of the clerk that the amount in dispute was not garnishable, being due for wages and being less than $25. The due for wages was not garnishable, but the due for judgment was, and judgment was given against them for the whole claim, $25, no evidence, it is alleged, being adduced against them. The judgment was set aside against them. The judgment was set aside against them.

The Ontario Entomologists Hold Their Annual Meeting.

Address by Rev. C. J. S. Bethune—Interesting Papers Read by Members—Officers for 1892.

The Entomological Society of Ontario held their annual meeting in the local society's rooms, Clarence street, Wednesday, Nov. 25. The president, Rev. C. J. S. Bethune, occupied the chair. In his annual address he welcomed those present on behalf of the society. He regretted the late time at which the convention was being held. His illness had prevented its taking place earlier.

The most serious insect pest of the year had been the "eye-spotted bud-moth," which had become very abundant and widespread. In Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick it had been very injurious to the apple. The "lesser apple leaf-roller," the "oblique-banded leaf-roller," had also been very plentiful. In the East-wood had been present in many parts of the province. The report of the "silver-top" in grass had been very plentiful. The turnip flea-beetle was always injurious and almost ubiquitous. The pea weevil was increasing in this province. The pear tree slug had been very harmful and abundant. The absence of tent caterpillars was noticeable. In orchards and gardens the oyster-shell bark was becoming very injurious owing to its habit of scraping the bark of the trees and larger limbs. Paris green was by far the simplest and most effective poison for all insects. Mr. Bethune referred to the meeting of economic entomologists in Washington last August. Many noted scientists were present. Attention was paid principally to insects that attacked fruit trees, crops and vegetables, as those most directly affecting the public. The speaker also discussed the necessity of preserving the forests. In Germany a rigid oversight of the forests was maintained by the Government. It was gratifying to him to realize the progress of the Canadian entomologists. Mr. Bethune, before closing, dwelt for a short time on the latest publications on entomology.

The report of the council showed a good increase in members during the year. The library had been increased by over 100 volumes, and a collection of lepidoptera had been purchased from J. A. Moffatt.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Rev. C. J. S. Bethune, M.A., D.C.L., Port Hope; vice-president, W. H. Harrington, Ottawa; secretary, W. E. Saunders, London; treasurer, J. M. Denton, London; directors, first division, James Evans, Ottawa; second division, J. D. Evans, Sarnia; third division, Gamble Giddies, Toronto; fourth division, A. H. Kilman, Ridgeway; fifth division, J. A. Moffatt, London; librarian and curator, J. A. Moffatt, London; editor of the "Canadian Entomologist," Dr. Bethune; editing committee, H. H. Lyman, Montreal; James Fletcher, Ottawa; Rev. T. W. Fyles, Quebec; delegate to Royal Society, Rev. C. J. S. Bethune; auditors, J. H. Bowman and W. E. Saunders, London.

Rev. Thomas W. Fyles read the report of the Entomological Society of Ontario to the Royal Society of Canada. This society had been started in 1862, organized in 1863 and in 1868 it commenced the publication of the "Canadian Entomologist." It was now one of the leading societies of America. Twenty-one reports had been submitted to it by the Council of Agriculture for Ontario. In Montreal a branch society had flourished. In this city the society consisted of four sections—the botanical, ornithological, geological, and microscopical—all of which were doing good work. J. A. Moffatt had been engaged to take charge of the society's rooms and specimens. The library now numbered 1,100 volumes and was being continually enlarged. Mr. Fyles announced some injurious insects prevalent in Canada.

John Deane, I. P. S., reported for the botanical section. Dr. Woolverton for the geological section. The report of the microscopical section was also furnished.

James Fletcher, Ottawa, spoke for a few minutes on his visit to Mrs. W. H. Edwards, of West Virginia. She was the author of "Butterflies in America."

A paper on "The Flora and Fauna of Japan" was read by W. H. Harrington, of Ottawa.

Rev. Thomas W. Fyles, of South Quebec, read an interesting retrospective paper on the "Nematus Eriochthonii." The operations of this very destructive insect were first noticed in 1880. They preyed particularly on tamarack trees, completely devastating them, and to the ravages of the saw-fly, tamarack trees in Quebec are worth only half their former price for ship-building material. With its food-plant the insect must necessarily disappear, and in years to come the specimens preserved in cabinets will be regarded as rarities.

A paper on "Can insects survive freezing?" was read by H. H. Lyman, of Montreal. He was convinced that some insects were killed by being frozen, but that others (caterpillars for instance) survived frost. He spoke from personal experience, and cited authorities.

The meeting then adjourned.

It is with the greatest confidence that Hood's Sarsaparilla is recommended for loss of appetite, indigestion, sick headache, and similar troubles.
