Non-Combatants in Danger. The archbishop let it be known here that he has grave fears regarding the fate of thousands of non-combatants in the capital, and he expressed his belief that should the Zapata forces enter the city there would be a riot of looting, and especially of the cathedrals and churches, which are popularly sup-posed to be filled with treasure.

The alleged determination of Villa to deal severely with the dignitaries of the church and the disfavor with which the rebels, both north and south, regard all those who wear the robes of the church, are said to have for a basis the financial assistance which the church has extended to Huerta. Early in Huerta's campaigns against the re bels, the church contributed 7,000,000 pesos, and the amount is said now to have reached 20,000,000 pesos. While it is true that financial aid has been given, the churchmen are known to have protested against some of the assessments, but were virtually forced to Call Any Day and Examine Books Given to Readers at Cost of Distribution.

Our readers are urged to lose no time n presenting six Panama certificates and getting the beautiful big book offered by The Advertiser.

The plan is fully explained in the announcements printed from day to day and also in the certificate printed elsewhere in these columns every day.

The title of this new illustrated book is "Panama and the Canal in Picture It is a splendid large voland Prose." ume, double the dimensions of the usual size novel, is appropriately bound in tropical red vellum cloth, stamped in front cover. Willis J. Abbot, the author, not only tells his readers all about the great canal, but also writes most entertainingly of the people and the country. It is the complete story of Panama and the canal, told in an interesting style which gives you the exact information without seeming to be technical. Every man, woman and child who expects to keep up with the times will want read this story. It is like taking the trip vourself.

One enthusiastic admirer writes: wish that I might meet the author personally and tell him how delighted I am with this most enjoyable trip to Panama and the Canal." Words of praise are coming from all sources, and everybody is delighted with this magnificent book tions. Look for the certificate and clip

The gardener, trundling a wheelbarrow, came around the side of the house and stopped to wipe the perspiration from his shining forehead.

"Warm?" asked Molly sympathetically, enjoying to the utmost the rare pleasure of seeeing someone else compelled to work while she had nothing to do but keep cool and amuse herself.

"Awful," said the gardeaer.

Molly leaned forward. "Timothy," said she, "don't forget the tables and chairs that are to be moved to the lawn, and mend that summer-house I spoke to you more for me, if I can help it." "Take the upper road. I do not want to go near the village today. I don't like your Mr. Patterson. I saw him hanging around the rocks yesterday. He makes me nervous. A guilty conscience, I suppose. I take every strange youth I see for Algernon until I am sure he isn't. But please tell me what you think honestly. Joe. Do I act as if I were used to having servants? "You're all right," declared Algernon, vaguely worried about Holmes. What was he hanging around for?

She glanced up and caught his admiring eyes with just a hint of amusement in their mild gray depths. She blushed and turned away, staring before her up the road, lying hot and dusty in the August sunshine.

The little car puffed up to the top of a hill and stopped.

I know," said he leaning forward to look under the brim of her hat into her eyes of Irish blue. "Don't worry over Hancock, Joe," said she coldly, "It is no concern of yours if he can't take care of himself. And I mean not to let him," she added. "Come tell me what to do. "Who admits it? I don't."

"In your heart of hearts you do, along with the rest of the world. You know you with the rest of the world. You know you do. You can't look me in the eyes and swear that you do not." He paused, but she only shook her head in denial and he went on. "I know all about it. I am not the usual girl of my class, protected from trouble and poverty, ignorant of the world and what it means, this being poverty-stricken. My employers always grew fond of me and made much of me, but I never reciprocated. I don't know that it means the strick of the s why, except that poverty is like a lemon-squeezer to wring the soul dry of any of the softer feelings. And no matter how broad-minded they were there was always a difference between us! neither side could be doff, banishes every trace, and when the skin is washed to remove the re-maining delatone it will be left smooth, firm and entirely free from spot or a difference between as the control of orget that we were simply employer and employed. FATHER LOISELLE IS NOT YET REINSTATED

Rumored That Case May Be Carried to Rome Shortly.

[Special to The Advertiser.] WINDSOR, May 12.—The differences between Bishop Fallon, of London, and Father Albert Loiselle, parish priest at River Canard, are not yet settled and he outcome is being watched with no little interest all through this district, especially since rumors have arisen that the case may be carried to Rome.

Father Loiselle it is reported is in Otawa today. Further interest centres in the case, ecause it arose in connection with the bilingual question. Father Loiselle, is alleged to have made certain charges against the methods of Bishop Fallon. nd it was stated to The Advertiser tonight that he was given an opportunity by the London prelate of either substantiating or withdrawing what he had said. It is stated that he held that the Diocesan court before which he was called, was incompetent, and that he deliberately walked out thereby ignoring the authority of Bishop Fallon by whom he was promptly suspended.
