London, April 24.—The Canadian government and steamship company representatives are now engaged in inquiries and negotiations regarding a new immigration movement on a much larger scale than the exodus from the Hebrides.

New developments arise from politics and religious differences, which as in the case of the Hebrides, are now engaged in inquiries and negotiations regarding a new immigration movement on a much larger scale than the exodus from the Hebrides.

Catholics in Northern Ireland and Protestants in Southern Ireland are still in being victims of disorders and animosities afflicting their country. A great many have already left their native land.

Move to England.
Southern Protestants have come to England, where government and private relief agencies are doing something, though inadequately to relieve them in their distress.

These unfortunates are mostly of the business, professional and landed classes, who were comparatively well-to-do in Ireland, but have lost their property and do not consider even their persons safe in their old land.

Northern Catholics are flocking to Britain, especially to Glasgow and the Clyde. The Glasgow Protestant clergy are protesting against what they call a Roman Catholic invasion, and in view of the unemployment already rife in the Clyde, there is much feeling against the newcomers on economic grounds.

Serious attempts have been considered for Catholics of the north of Ireland changing places with Protestants of the south, but this does not appear practical to any important degree. Emigration to Canada and the United States is large, but it has proceeded on the basis of arrangements with individuals. The example of the Hebrides has given a flip to the plans for mass movement.

A decisive factor in question will be the attitude of the Dominion and the provincial authorities in Canada.

This chief, following the recovery by the British of a quantity of stolen police rifles, was taunted by the women of his tribe. He then swore an oath upon the Koran that he would make the British feel the vengeance of the natives as they never had before.

Visitors will be taken up the tower in a giant cage, which will rotate around the exterior at the rate of 14 miles an hour. Engineers predict that the tower will be able to see the lights of Birmingham, 115 miles from London, from the top.

SECESSION IS WAR CRY
IN NOVA SCOTIA FIGHT

Premier Armstrong Says It Has No Great Significance in Minds of People.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, April 24.—"Secession has become the war cry of H. W. Corning and a small group of Conservatives. It has no great significance. Firstly, because it is only a way of coming into the limelight to gather votes; secondly, because they cannot think of any other way to attack the government."

Premier Armstrong of Nova Scotia made the above statement here yesterday in discussing the latest political development in his province, adding that self-government is indeed far away from the minds of the people of Nova Scotia.

"As far as I can see," said the premier, "the only people we could make any treaties with would be those of Subtle Island."

On the other hand, he stated that the Pordney tariff bill and the high freight rates, the lack of preferential tariff and other oversights had so disheartened the people of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island "that they feel that they are being left out."

He said: "I am sorry to say that we are losing all our fine young fishermen. They were leaving for the United States, and the problem was very bit as serious in Nova Scotia today as it was in Quebec or the prairie provinces."

NO SPECIAL VOTE
ON BUS QUESTION
BEFORE DECEMBER

Want No Snap Verdict on Motor Bus Purchase, Asserts the Mayor.

SHOW BUS FIRST

Favors Local Demonstration To Show People What They May Vote On.

Although a consistent advocate of a municipal motorbus system, Mayor Wenige is unwilling that a vote of the people should be taken upon this issue until the next municipal election.

"I would not receive a true verdict if a referendum of the city was taken on the same day that the by-election is held in Ward Four," he explains.

His worship says experience has taught that but a very small minority of the people turn out to vote at a special election of this character more particularly. There would be adequate time if an expression of opinion was not sought until December.

"We would likely carry the proposition," he continued, "but if we received it by a minority vote it would not have the real backing of the people, and that is what we want before we go ahead."

Mayor Wenige contends that the initial move of the council should be the exhibition here of a couple of modern buses in order that citizens may be given a fair opportunity to see in actual operation what they are purchasing and will have to ride in. The average resident he maintains still entertains the idea that the type of bus operated last year, is what it is proposed to purchase.

He is still opposed for a municipal motorbus system. He would not, but I would not have any vote until December. Give the people a chance to learn more about the proposition."

Crowd Westminster Abbey

Thousands of Tourists Get Peep Inside the Historical Church
Where Duke of York Will Be Married Thursday.

By HAL O'FLAHERTY.
Special Cable to The London Advertiser and Chicago Daily News. Copyright.
London, April 24.—Thousands of tourists, newly arrived from Canada, the United States or from points on the continent, have been swarming through Westminster Abbey viewing the arrangements for the Duke of York's wedding on Thursday.

Whitehall in the afternoon presents an unusual picture of an endless stream of visitors transforming England's famous executive highway into another Broadway or Michigan avenue. The elaborate arrangements for the wedding are causing complete pandemonium, and according to those who last year witnessed Princess Mary's marriage, this coming ceremony will equal, in vivid and colorful details, the Empire's enthusiasm for royal nuptials, with their accompanying pageantry, which never seems to dwindle.

From Florida there arrived today a delicately-constructed bridal wreath of orange blossoms, perfectly preserved while from South Africa came huge bouquets of orange blossoms for decorative purposes. From one end of England to the other, women are reading today minute descriptions of Lady Elizabeth's wedding gown.

Full of Pride and Envy.
All of them, from court ladies to domestic help, are filled with a mixture of pride and envy, as they picture to themselves the dainty creations of moire falling straight from the shoulders, the ruffles and lace, the line written about the delicate pearl embroidery, Venetian slippers, Nottingham lace and cream satins, for in feminine minds burns an eternal picture of Cinderella, snatched from common-place surroundings and transported to the grandeur of a wedding in Westminster Abbey.

There lies the charm of the Duke's romance, for he brings his bride from a semi-obscure home in Scotland to an exalted place in the nation's eyes.

In each description of the wedding gown, appears a note regarding the veil, which is made up of a hundred yards of tulle, and is secured from the face, a custom descended from ancient days when court intrigues made it possible to substitute a false face under a heavy veil. It happened once, according to ancient legends, and ever since brides have

Royal weddings, heralded with joy by the nation, bring also a harvest of gold to the court dress-makers of London, who have been flooded with orders for gowns and costumes to be worn at the many levees of this gala week. Crowded workrooms have run day and night, rushing through belated orders, some of which will not be delivered until an hour or so before the ceremony in the Abbey.

By way of contrast to the wedding procession, hundreds of unemployed men will join London's underclass in securing points of vantage along the route, camping out over Wednesday night in the hope of selling their places the next day to more fortunately situated sightseers.

EXPECT PEASANTS TO GET MORE RIGHTS IN BULGARIA

Associated Press Despatch.
Sofia, April 24.—Premier Stamboulsky's victory in the Bulgarian elections, giving him upwards of two-thirds of the membership of parliament, will probably result in a revision of the constitution so as to establish the privileges of the peasant class and diminish the prerogatives of the king.

After the chairman's address by S. M. Fisher, M. D., the valedictory will be read by Miss Essie MacPhee, G. A. Ramsay, M.D., and the Rt. Rev. Mr. O'Connor, who will also deliver addresses, and vocal soloists will be rendered by Ed. Webster and Bruce Wells, respectively. Following the singing the solo solo presentation will take place.

No effort has been spared to make the program an interesting one, and those who have charge of the arrangements are confident that the spacious hall will be packed with the many friends and relatives of the graduating nurses.

The personnel of this year's class is as follows: Margaret Rice Maxwell, St. Johns, N. B.; Grace M. O'Hara, Chesley; Elizabeth S. Thuet, London; Mary Loreto Walsh, St. Mary's; Mary Wilhelmina Cuddy, Strathroy; Essie MacPhee, Alexandria; Helen Marie Farrell, Woodstock; Edythe Camilla Deane, London; Kathleen M.
