

A Request of the Court.

The late Thomas Nolan, a well-known member of the Bar of New York, was once retained as counsel for a poor widow named Mulcahy. She was suing a construction company for damages by reason of her husband's death, resulting from injuries sustained in the company's service. The case had been frequently postponed, so that it was in a very disturbed state of mind that the widow sought the lawyer just before the suit came up for the eighth time.

"Certainly," replied the court.

"Will your honor kindly shtep down to my office and tell Mrs. Mulcahy that you have again adjourned the case?"

'Twas a Good Advertisement.

* * * In due course the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada came under investigation (of the Royal Commission). It had nothing to conceal, and, so far as it was concerned, the investigation served principally to show how really strong and well managed the Company was.—Searchlight, London, England.

DUTCH GUIANA.—Residence of the Governor.

In court the next day Nolan's rich brogue was more than usually fervid as he fought against the further adjournment of the case.

"I am sorry," said the Justice presiding, "but, Mr. Nolan, your opponent has shown good cause for adjournment. The case will, therefore, go over till next week."

"Very well, sor," said the lawyer, sweetly, "but might I ask wan personal favor of this court?"
