Editor New York Commercial,-Editor New York Commercial,— Advice to our prospective female stock broker is to the effect that she is aboard the wrong train. When one buys a ticket for New York and finds himself on the train to Denver, he would get off at the first stop. This short letter is the signal. Our reader had better gather up the fragments of lost time in consider-ing the proposition, and turn back ing the proposition, and turn back to the avenues open when the specu-lation thought was first suggested to her. She is about to see her darkest days. She is about to step into sinking sand. Any man or woman who plays the stock market margins is an idiot.
