WALL PAPERS

AND HYGIENE

Elizabeth Hyatt-Woolf in The London Express:

There are two characteristics peculiar to wall-papers, popular acquaintance with which appears to be more or less dormant. They are of physical and psychical value. Glancing casually at a prettily decorated wall, it would not appear that the making of the paper often has unhealthy results. First of all, the fundamental paper is made from pulp secured from masses of rubbish, sometimes gathered almost from the gutters of the streets, so that porous, thin, cheap paper is that porous, thin, cheap paper is ticularly deleterious owing to its text of also printing. The printing as so poisonous that the countries it is said, have passalable prohibiting the use of wallers in which poison has been used the manufacture of the inks. Headache, Throbbing, Fulness

"I think I ought to relate particulars of my ill-health, I am sure there are many women like myself, who have sensations and feelings that worry them, and which when neglected carry them, and which when neglected carry them actually into extreme ill-health. These morbid feelings I am sure were simply the outcome of nerve debility and inseltude. I realized how dreadful it is never to feel the loy of vigor and churance. I actually counted the steps I would have to take to go to do something. That is how I was for nearly two long years. The sense of dizzhess and fulness, of ringing, roar hard gave me proof ing, or buzzing in the ears, made me weary and nervous. Scruetimes it would be constriction across the forehead-a dull heavy weight, numb or tinging feelings prersing into my head. I was on the way to worse troubles. It was ferrozone that gave me proof that all these sensations were the outcome of functional disturbances, and not organic disease. Ferrozone built up my nerves and lent my heart vigor and gave my circulation natural strength. I was no longer bothered with flushes or cold extremities after. Ferrozone had renewed my blood. Ferrozone ought to be called nerve tone. It fatters the neivees, makes them strong and renewed my blood. Ferrozone in proposity of the word alone to refer it back. Almost every consolidation that is put thru has a somewhat different reason for its existence. For instance, in the consolidation of eight of the larger oathead and flour milling concerns of the Province of Ontario into the Canadian Cereal and Milling Company, the main reason was a desire to save to the various companies a great deal of the money that was being needlessly wasted by the keen competition between the various mills for the same business.
